Nanaimo Chinatown

Historic 'Village' Demolished In Sea of Flames

NANAIMO—Chinese leaders met to discuss the rebuilding of Nanaimo's Chinatown late last night as the historic, Old West-style village lay in heaps of glowing embers after the most spectacular fire in the Hub City's history.

First estimates of the damage put the total, including loss of personal effects, at more than $200,000. Number of homeless Chinese reached 250. (See Pages 3, 12.)

BLAZING RUBBLE

The fire broke out about 4.45 p.m. and within two hours most of Chinatown was reduced to blazing rubble. Flames were still gushing from the debris early this morning.

At one point other residential areas of Nanaimo were threatened by burning shingles and debris carried by a 15-mile-an-hour wind but the danger eased as the wind dropped.

Dazed old people had to be forced to leave their homes as one after another the old wooden buildings were engulfed in flames shooting hundreds of feet into the sky.

ALL EVACUATED

Despite reports of a fatality, Wallace Chang, president of the Wah Hing Land Company, owners of most of the buildings, said he believed everyone had been evacuated.

Only injury reported was suffered by a spectator who tripped over a hose and cut his head.

The fire started in the back of an unoccupied house at 6 Pine Street.

2,000 SPECTATORS
Flames and smoke billowed high over Nanaimo and it wasn't long before 2,000 persons gathered at the fire.

Many of the Chinese apparently had no intention of leaving their homes and possessions, but Howard Chang, 20, and his brother Dennis, 17, sparked the drive to get them out by heaving mattresses and blankets out into the street.

Many old people were later

Life Savings Lost

Elderly Chinese Sleep Calmly In Army Bunks

By G. E. MORTIMORE and J. T. JONES

NANAIMO—Elderly Chinese removed from their burned homes were helped up the steps of the old Nanaimo army camp by volunteer nurses and St. John Ambulance workers late last night, were issued army blankets, and settled down to sleep calmly in the lower tier of army double-decker bunks.

One old man, wearing only one shoe, refused to let go of the suitcase which he was carrying. Very few brought any belongings out at all. They rested stoically without complaint; some were invalids, some were crippled. A few of them brought only a pair of slippers which were laid beside their beds.

SAVINGS GONE

One little boy, with toy guns and a holster, hung determinedly onto his grandfather and went to sleep beside him. Some of them had lost their life savings which they had been stowing away for many years in tin boxes and under the floors of buildings because the, distrusted banks.

A woman with a baby strapped to her back, refused to give up charge of the child as she moved out of her home.

NO COMPLAINTS

They didn't complain, they sat quietly and lay uncomplainingly under blankets smelling of mothballs. Many of them had come here to work in the coal mines and had lived here the bulk of their lives.

"I remember seeing them file past on their way to work a shift in the mines when I was a kid," said Mrs. Thelma Slogar, a St. John ambulance worker, who kept a vigil on a floor of the dormitory hut.

COUGHS HEARD

A few racking coughs were heard in the dormitory from elderly Chinese with lung trouble.

Ten women and two small children were accommodated at St. Ann's convent. Ninety-four people, mainly elderly men, were checked in at the reception centre in the army barracks at the old Camp Nanaimo.

Numbers of people, bewildered by the ordeal, still were hiding in the bush bordering

Pine Street. Search parties were doing their best to locate everyone.

Maj. Bob Weir, officer commanding C Squadron, B.C. Regiment, took charge of reception and relief. He is a reserve army officer and Nanaimo lawyer.

CIVIL DEFENCE

He was assisted by Dawson Gordon, civil defence controller. Provincial welfare authorities were preparing to take over rehabilitation of evacuees.

Within minutes of the tragedy, Mount Benson Legion Branch set up a clearing house for all donations and offers of help. The CCF was planning a fund-raising bingo.

CASH DONATIONS

The Community Chest will accept cash donations and will issue receipts. The address: Fire Relief Fund, Box 304, Nanaimo.

Among possessions lost were irreplaceable photographs, passports and other personal papers. For a Chinese approaching pension age, a passport is often the only means of establishing age.

GOOD AND BAD

Stories of human good and bad came out of the fire. Many students whose friends lived in threatened homes hurried up to Chinatown to help with the evacuation. There were also reports of looting of furniture and valuables.

The people of Nanaimo early today took justifiable pride in their mass relief effort. The main problem was not so much to get assistance as to sort out the flood of food, clothing and even furniture that was coming in.

Ancient Chinese medicines like dried lizards and ginseng root went up in smoke with

Diefenbaker Invites Macmillan to Ottawa

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker Friday night confirmed he has invited Prime Minister Macmillan to visit Ottawa before returning to England from the United Nations.

Mr. Diefenbaker also said he will return next week to New York for a third visit to the United Nations. He said no definite date has been fixed.

Neutrals' Summit Bid Puts Squeeze on Ike

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Five so-called neutralist nations, including India, asked Friday that President Eisenhower and Premier Khrushchev meet in a new summit as a "first urgent step" to ease world tension.

President Sukarno of Indonesia introduced the five-country resolution at the end of a long policy speech before the 15th United Nations General Assembly.

India's Prime Minister Nehru then requested that it be placed on the assembly's agenda. The proposal was automatically added to the agenda without further discussion.

Sponsors of the resolution are Ghana, India, Indonesia, the United Arab Republic and Yugoslavia.

United States observers speculated that the neutralist move placed the U.S. in a tight squeeze since Eisenhower pressed unwillingness to meet while saying he is willing to follow UN guidance in the search for peace—has also exposed the Soviet leader to attacks against the U.S.

'Still in Same Place' After Talk with Mac

NEW YORK (UPI)—Premier Khrushchev said last night that Russia's relations with the West are right where they were before he met with British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan Thursday night.

Khrushchev, answering questions at a reception given by the Afghanistan delegation to the United Nations, agreed with Macmillan's appraisal of the two-hour two-man summit meeting as "calm and reasonable." Macmillan said the session ended in a stalemate.

"We are still in the same place," he said. "Everyone is left with his nose and hands in the right place, and his ears, too."

World Demands It, Says Mac

There's a Chance for Pre-Summit Mood

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Friday poured out more than $306,000,000 to strengthen drastically its army and navy missile arsenal.

The navy got $106,000,000 for the submarine-launched Polaris missile, the army pumped an additional $199,125,000 into development of the Nike-Zeus and the air force was given an additional $33,800,000 for the Samos "spy" satellite program.

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Macmillan said Friday night there is a chance that East and West will get back into the mood of six months ago before the failure of the Paris summit conference.

In a television interview recorded in New York, where he is attending United Nations sessions, the prime minister said:

"What's going to happen? I can't tell you. It may go very badly. It may deteriorate. The Communists may be angry. At the same time, I think there's a chance that we'll get back to the mood which we were in six months ago before the summit conference flopped in Paris.

"I think we could get back to it. It needs a little generosity on everybody's side. It needs a little good sense. It needs a little loss of face, if you like, but I think it's what the peoples of the world want."

G. E. Mortimore's regular "All Aboard" column will not appear today because of his special assignment at the Nanaimo fire.

250 Homeless

Chinatown Burns

found lying in bushes or staggering around in a dazed condition nearby. Welfare organizations, service clubs and individual citizens of Nanaimo fed and housed a large number of the homeless while the rest were evacuated to an army camp.

Midway through the fire a truck from Harewood brigade belched out of the flames and smoke with sirens screaming. It had been cornered by flames in the north end of the village. Firemen had to break through to safety.

ROOF COLLAPSED

Nelson Wong, 15, said he saw the fire break out as a small flame burst from the unoccupied house. Five minutes later the roof of the blazing building collapsed.

"I was in the kitchen cooking dinner when someone came in and said there was a fire at No. 6," said Mrs. Henry Wong, who lived at 9 Pine Street. "I went outside and the policeman said, 'Don't go back in. I lost everything.'"

Some residents lost priceless antique treasures which had been in their families for more than a century.

All fire equipment in the Nanaimo area was rushed to the blaze but a shortage of water allowed the flames to spread at will.

SLID DOWN PIPE

One old man, 80 years of age, slid down a drainpipe from a second-floor window to escape the flames. A small Chinese boy remained sitting on the sidewalk crying that his grandfather had gone back into his blazing home in an effort to save a mattress.

At the height of the conflagration no one could get closer than 300 feet to the flames.

Water from the fire hoses evaporated into steam before it could reach the burning buildings. Bulldozers had to clear new roads for the fire trucks and the crowds of spectators hampered firemen.

The Chinatown village was opened in 1910 by a syndicate, with members in both Victoria and Nanaimo.

WESTWOOD HELPS

Among the first at the blaze was Recreation Minister Earle Westwood, who helped wherever he could.

Mayor Pete Maffeo directed relief operations from a radio car at the fire and minutes after he appealed for aid scores of Nanaimo persons rushed to help.

Helping Mayor Maffeo were Aldermen Haig Burns and Douglas Green.

Scores of volunteers helped carry furniture, television sets, blankets and prized possessions from the homes one by one, minutes before the fire reached them. Heate Street was lined with evacuated belongings, but in most of the houses nothing was saved, because the fire spread too quickly along the little village on Pine Street.

Among those who helped salvage belongings was Chuck Wong, who didn't live in the Chinatown village but had managed a cafe there.

HOLDING BABY

Mrs. Wallace Chang, who operated the Puss 'n' Boots Chop Suey House, lost everything in the restaurant and stood at the side of Heate Street, out of reach of the scorching heat, holding a three-month-old baby belonging to someone whose home was threatened.

Junt Yuen, 79, one of the first residents of Chinatown, lost everything in the fire at House 592, except a kit bag he managed to take out with him. He stood almost unnoticed by the side of the street trying to comprehend the whole thing and wondering where he would spend the night.

But he didn't have to wait too long. In answer to Mayor Maffeo's pleas for aid, Maj. Bob Weir of the army camp came along with an offer to throw open empty army huts. The Knights of Columbus also offered its St. Peter's Hall for relief accommodation.

Island Coach Lines donated two buses to carry evacuees to their new army hut quarters. Walls and Bradshaw offered all the used chest-dressers in their store to provide beds. The Lions Air Cadets gave up their hut in the army camp and local furniture vans and volunteers moved evacuated belongings to the army camp.

BLANKETS ORDERED

Jim Buckle of the Red Cross phoned to Vancouver headquarters for 100 blankets and other relief. Dawson Gordon of the Salvation Army was on hand to help as representatives of other churches.

Other volunteers went to the army camp to provide coffee and sandwiches for the evacuees.

Officials had some trouble getting some of the older Chinese to leave in the buses to the army camp. They were just too bewildered to understand.

SITTING IN CLOTHES

Quite a few were sitting among piled-up clothes, furniture and baby buggies a short distance from the flames.

They were in a dazed condition.

One, 65-year-old Yip Jung, a resident of Chinatown for 40 years, was taken to a home where a bowl of Chinese food was put before him. He just stared at it, his head cupped in his hands.

TAKE IT FROM THERE

Asked what plans would be made in regard to rebuilding, Nanaimo cafe proprietor David Thom said:

"A large proportion are pensioners, you can take it from there."

Early today an emergency meeting of directors of the building society was under way to discuss the rebuilding of the village.

CREATED INTEREST

Nanaimo's old Chinatown has created interest all over North America.

Two years ago it served as the location for a movie, featuring a typical western town, with wooden verandas hanging out over the street from the second storeys. Only last week a group of mainland university artists urged the city of Nanaimo to preserve the Chinatown as a historic monument. The old Chinatown was often sketched and painted.

SECOND BLAZE

It was the second time Nanaimo's Chinatown had burned. The old Chinatown to the south of the city was wiped out by fire prior to 1908, when the new one on Pine Street was constructed.

Practically everyone admitted Chinatown was a fire trap of the worst kind, but most wanted it preserved because of its quaintness.

It had been a place for night life in Nanaimo, and it was possible to buy a bottle there at any time of the night and early morning. There used to be a honky tonk chop suey dine and dance establishment on the second floor of one of the old buildings.

NEON LIGHTS

It had been closed for some time along with one other restaurant down the street, but the Puss 'n' Boots Chop Suey House was an attraction until it went up in flames yesterday. Its bright neon lights had shown the way to Chinatown, just across the railway tracks.

Chinatown was mostly occupied by the older Chinese.

Full Independence Won By U.K.'s Largest Colony

LAGOS (Reuters)—Nigeria, once a main source of U.S. Negro slaves, became a fully independent nation within the Commonwealth today. At the stroke of midnight, thousands of fireworks cascaded into the tropical sky to celebrate the birth of a nation.

The Union Jack, signifying a century of British rule, was lowered in a ceremony at Lagos race track. Nigerian officials proudly hoisted their green and white flag amid scenes of rejoicing through the city.

LAGOS, Nigeria (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming arrived here Friday under a broiling African sun to represent Canada at Nigeria's Independence Day celebrations today.

Fleming was met by his Nigerian counterpart, Chief Festus Okotie-Eboh, who wore a flowing white robe and a huge smile.

Your Good Health

Fear of Being Shut In Not Abnormal Reaction

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Since childhood I've had claustrophobia—elevators, buses, then cars. I am 39 now and feel that I must do something about it. My doctor seemed to think it would eventually fade away, and that I didn't need a psychiatrist."

"I am tempted to make reservations for an air trip east, yet I'm almost panic-stricken at the thought of being 'trapped' in an airplane."

"First, would you suggest psychiatric help? Second, if I forced myself into an airplane, do you think the terror and physical experience could become great enough to cause a heart attack, or perhaps some other serious result? I am in good health now.—M.G."

"I don't like to try to give you a yes or no answer to the question of psychiatry. In the first place, I don't know enough about you and the severity of your problem. In the second place, there are other factors to consider."

But above all, remember this. Claustrophobia, basically, is not abnormal. Most of us have a natural fear of being shut in—a dark closet, a very small chamber, or whatever. I suppose a great many of us may have a panicky qualm at the moment we see the plane door close when we take our first airplane trip.

Some of us may feel the finality of that moment more strongly than others do. Some of us may find that moment of worry submerged in the interest and excitement of doing something new.

Real "claustrophobia" is really only an extreme and hence abnormal exaggeration of an emotion which, in ordinary amounts, is reasonable and perfectly human.

It's a matter of degree, you see. And saying "yes" or "no" to whether you should consult a psychiatrist depends on the degree of the problem. Is it mild enough so you can explain it to yourself, and gradually overcome it? How serious a handicap is it, really? And what about the financial picture—do you want to spend the money for expert treatment, or isn't it that serious?

the destruction of a Chinese herbal store.

Although not even a guess could be offered on how many non-Christian members of the community had lost priceless household shrines, there was general rejoicing that both the Chinese Masonic building and the Chinese United Church were saved from the flames.

HOSE THREAT

Three old men tried to get back into their burning homes but were turned back by firemen who threatened to turn hoses on them. It was believed that they had money buried inside.

In the barracks, signs were lettered in Chinese for the men's and women's washrooms.

For many years, the residents of Nanaimo's Chinatown, fearful of just such a disaster as happened last night, have maintained a 24-hour fire watch.

FIRES CAUGHT

The watch has been manned by elderly men who patrolled the main street. Several fires have been extinguished by their fast-moving bucket brigade in the past few months.

Last night, at the height of the fire, while every available fireman and pumper truck was pouring high-powered streams on the flames, a tiny elderly Chinese carrying a leaky bucket was seen pouring as much water as he could carry on the fire.

A major worry of firefighters was a huge tank of liquid carbon dioxide on the adjoining premises of the Island Bottling Works.

While the chemical is not explosive, it was under tremendous pressure and heat could have set off a blast that would have levelled a wide area.

VOLUNTEERS HELP

All volunteer firemen from surrounding districts and nearly a dozen former volunteers turned out to help control the blaze.

W. C. Millar, inspector for the militia fire marshalls' office, arrived from Vancouver to conduct an investigation.

"We haven't a clue yet what caused it," he said.

A holding party of Nanaimo and Harewood firemen were patrolling the blazing embers throughout the night. The fire was completely under control. Its glow was still visible from the windows of the army barracks.

Cult Killers Murderers

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP)

Three Americans and a Jamaican were convicted of murder Friday night in the "Kangaroo court," slaying of a fellow member of the Rastafarian cult. Three other Americans were acquitted.

Sentences were not immediately announced.

Most of the Americans face further murder charges in the ambush death of two British soldiers at the same camp.

'We Were Lucky' Says Fire Chief

NANAIMO—The hard-working crew that battled yesterday's inferno in Nanaimo's Chinatown came through unscathed except for some minor scorching from the searing flames.

"We were lucky," Fire Chief Colin McArthur said as he returned to the firehall after seven nerve-wracking hours directing the fight against one of the worst blazes in the city's history.

Chief McArthur said his men found what appeared to be the charred remains of a body in the ruins. He said they will have to be examined by a doctor to determine if they are human remains.

Some 50 firemen from Nanaimo and Harewood and others from nearby Chase River and Northfield fought the blaze. Other crews rushed in from Ladysmith and Departure Bay to stand by, along with a provincial fire marshals' unit from Duncan.

The firefighters kept the blaze from spreading outside the Chinatown area into the rest of the city.

"It was pretty tough for a while," Chief McArthur said. "The wind kept shifting and we didn't know where the flames would go next."

Crews were kept on the job all night to guard against a sudden flareup from the smoking embers.

Kasavubu Plea in Vain As Indonesians Arrive

LEOPOLDVILLE, Congo (UPI)—More than 1,000 Indonesian troops arrived in the Congo yesterday, over the objections of President Joseph Kasavubu, to increase the strength of the UN force here to 18,000 men.

The Indonesians, 1,100 strong, were to land at Matadi for service on the southern reaches of the Congo River. They would relieve Moroccan troops now maintaining order in the area, who will be transferred here.

The UN is bringing in the Indonesians despite the letters Kasavubu sent to Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld and President Sukarno asking that they be kept out of the country. Congo sources said Kasavubu fears the Indonesians, like the Ghanaians and Guinean troops who have been ordered out of the Congo by strongman Col. Joseph Mobutu, would side with ousted ex-premier Patrice Lumumba. Meanwhile, it appeared that the roundtable "unity" conference that had been scheduled here appeared likely to collapse before it really gets underway because of the opposition of Lumumba and Moise Tshombe, president of "independent" Katanga province. Tshombe toured his domain yesterday, inspecting the Belgian-led troops who guard the province which "seceded" from the Congo when it became independent July 1. He had agreed previously to discuss "confederation" with Kasavubu, but Thursday he cold-shouldered an invitation to the unity conference.

SuperMac to the Rescue

PRIME Minister Macmillan's cool and precise presentation before the United Nations General Assembly has regained for the West the initiative in the high level debate on international affairs and tensions.

In stark contrast to the belligerent attitude of Soviet Premier Khrushchev, Mr. Macmillan addressed the session calmly and correctly. With almost icy detachment, he ripped Soviet accusations to shreds, forthrightly placing Britain's views and policies before the world in such a manner as to dispel any doubts that might remain in the minds of either the Communist or neutralist nations.

Nor did his approach lack the human touch. His humorous reference to relations between the United Kingdom and Ireland fell on appreciative ears, as did his superb effort in squelching Mr. Khrushchev, which resulted in the Soviet Premier looking like a reprimanded schoolboy.

Judging from the resoundingly favorable reaction to his speech, not only from Britain's traditional allies but from the uncommitted nations, it would appear that Mr. Macmillan is now being looked upon as the new leader of the Western world.

It may not be for nothing that the British Prime Minister is known in his own land as "SuperMac."

Columbia Power

THE report that the United States and Canada have reached some sort of agreement on the hydro-electric development of the Columbia River is good news for all British Columbians. This is the river which gives the best promise of a plentiful supply of electrical power at the most economical rates.

At the same time it might be foolish to assume, as one political leader appears to have done, that because of this agreement B.C. will no longer need Peace River power.

All the best brains in the utilities field agree that sometime after 1975 electrical power from both sources will be required. Besides, the reported agreement on the Columbia from the international standpoint does not mean that the thousand-and-one minor problems of damming this great river have been settled.

There is apparently still to be decided the matter of the Kootenay River offering either diversion into the Columbia or a dam of its own at Libby; the order of progress on Mica or High Arrow; and of course the people of the Kootenays themselves have to be heard on the question of the flooding of their lands.

Mr. Ray Perrault's statement that the latest Columbia development has killed or at least delayed for years the need for the Peace River seems both premature and unwise. How could he possibly be sure? If details bog down on the Columbia, the Peace River could still be of immediate importance in B.C.'s power requirements.

The current industrial lull in the province, and elsewhere in Canada, has certainly given B.C. power demand a respite but, as Mr. Harold Macmillan said this week in another context, we should be neither too optimistic nor too pessimistic, and we cannot assume that the dramatic expansion of the 1950 decade will not repeat itself in the near future. Because of that we may not yet be in a good position to turn down offers of foreign capital for Peace power, or indeed for any type of major development.

If, however, the Peace and the Columbia do proceed together, there is little doubt that B.C. will have an excess of power for a number of years. It is with this in mind that officials of B.C. Electric and Peace River Power are now advocating that the surplus to provincial requirement should be made available for export to the U.S.

This is a new concept of the local situation, and it is one that is directly in conflict with Canadian government policy. Yet the federal government anomalously has approved the export of natural gas, and there are some who will be tempted to agree that if export of electrical power—on a temporary and interruptible basis—were to enable the great Columbia and Peace projects to get on their feet, it might be justified.

But it is a matter not to be entered into lightly, and is probably a step to be taken only as a last resort.

A New Nation Emerges

TODAY the great new nation of Nigeria emerges to take its place among the independent and responsible countries of the world. Its attainment of this goal has been no less a victory of British colonial policies than it has of the people of the former dependency.

It stands in stark contrast to the haphazard and dangerous development of the Congolese Republic and underlines the proof that African nations can attain the full rights of self-government through the slower but surer process of education and training.

Rather than rush headlong into independence before it was ready, its leaders wisely waited until they had thoroughly mastered the arts and intricacies of government. It was only when this had been accomplished, with the wholehearted co-operation of the British Colonial Office, that the administration changed hands.

The effect of this policy can today stand the most stringent evaluation of the world. Nigeria's vast population of 35,000,000 souls are at peace with each other, its budget is balanced, its prosperity is the envy of the dark continent, and its administrative corps above reproach.

As a mark of the high esteem its people have for the British Crown, Nigeria has requested continuing membership in the Commonwealth. Above all else, with its sound constitutional training and the fact that it is now the most populous independent African country, Nigeria will be a leavening influence on its neighbors.

Canadians, as co-members of the family of Commonwealth nations, will especially wish the new country well.

Government Spending

The Facts of Life

By CLYDE BLACKBURN

OTTAWA—Government officials have been sent into action on their annual job of planning how to spend our money.

Preparation has started on the estimates for the fiscal year starting next April 1.

It is understood there has been no instruction to hold down—or to spread out.

Just the order to get the spending program planned as soon as possible. The treasury board and cabinet will do the trimming, if necessary and advisable.

The main estimates as presented to parliament for the current fiscal year, in a 600-page blue book, called for spending of about five and a half billion dollars.

There were a number of supplementary estimates added later during the parliamentary session. And the year is not nearly over.

Undoubtedly when parliament meets again there will be further supplementary estimates for the current year.

The likelihood is that the final figure will be almost a billion dollars more than the main estimate.

And it is a fair guess that the final figure for the next fiscal year will be that much more than whatever the experts bring out from their current huddles.

Particularly if there is any chance of an election next summer.

There is nothing new about any of this. It is just a reminder of an unpleasant fact of life.

If every living person in Canada paid the same portion of taxation it would be the equivalent of well over a dollar a day from each.

But many pay very few taxes that they know about—that is direct taxes—and many pay enormous sums which means they are in the money in a big way.

Everyone who spends any money for food, shelter, smokes, drinks, cars—almost anything he may buy—feeds the tax kitty.

And the total goes up every year. It will continue to go up every year.

Earnings and personal revenues also go up every year, except in depression periods, and so it balances off to some degree so long as times are good.

Now there is to be a long royal commission inquiry into public administration which will essentially have to do with public spending and public costs.

This will take some years to complete and will cost the taxpayer probably a million dollars.

During that period the annual costs of government probably will have increased another billion.

And the report may go into the archives along with a thousand or more accumulated from royal commissions since Confederation.

And probably, we hope, Canada will still be one of the happiest and most comfortable nations in the world.

$1 a Bottle

When Oil Was A Novelty

By KEN LIDDELL

CARDSTON, Alta. — Alberta's oil goes all over the country by pipeline today, but Oliver Aldridge remembers when it was sold in whisky bottles, and he remembers it well because as a lad of 12 years he did some of the bottling.

That was in 1899 when his father, William Aldridge, farmed and fished in what today is Waterton National Park in the southwest corner of Alberta. Waterton was the birthplace of Alberta's oil industry, not Turner Valley as is commonly supposed.

Sitting in a wicker chair in the bright kitchen of his home, Oliver Aldridge recalled something of those days when oil was used chiefly for limbering up joints of humans, taking the kinks out of harness, keeping flies off cattle and removing the terrible squeak from wagon wheels.

Aldridge does not contend that his father discovered the oil seepages along Cameron Creek—seepages that were known to the Indians—but it is his recollection that his father was the first to do anything about them by recovering oil from the water in the manner of placer mining.

When William Aldridge, the father, moved into Waterton area the only other white man around was Kootenai Brown, then a trader, who later became a parks official.

William Aldridge had come from Utah by covered wagon with his family that eventually numbered 15. Oliver Aldridge was born in 1885 and his recollection of Brown was that he was "pretty near an Indian" whose second wife, a Cree, was a most beautiful woman.

"It was really a kid peeking in on the conversations," Mr. Aldridge said. "The oil seepages were known, but I'm sure no humans had been around where dad found them. Dad was also sort of a prospector and I often went with him. We were camped one time on Pine Creek. We went to the creek for a pail of water. We found a hole in the sand, like where a bear had scratched, and there was the oil."

The family placer mined it, by running the sand over a chute and into a pond. The oil would get six inches thick in the pond and "we would shovel it off. We stored it in cans and bottles and then packed it out to sell to the settlers."

If the oil was used as ordinary machine oil, it brought $1 a gallon, sold in five-gallon cans that had once contained coal oil. But if it was used for medicinal purposes it was worth $1 a bottle.

The uses ran from rubbing it on stock to keep off flies to easing sore shoulders and necks on both humans and stock; as a lubricant for wagon wheels and as medicine for humans. The Indians said a spoonful in a glass of water would cure a headache, and it worked. Some settlers drank it, diluted, as a laxative.

And where were the bottles obtained? The answer was about as surprising as it was to chat with a man who had done the bottling.

The bottles were obtained from the three saloons in Cardston, which is a Mormon settlement and, as everyone knows, Mormons do not consume anything harder than water.

Mr. Aldridge said that Cardston had saloons when the area was in the Northwest Territories, before Alberta became a province and the Mormon influence on the vote made the area dry if not thirsty.

Reports from Ottawa

IF the government has any estimate of the number of persons who will be without work this winter, it isn't making that estimate public. But with 322,000 unemployed in August, normally a month of abundant job opportunities, it seems reasonable to assume that at least 750,000 will be jobless before spring.

And remembering that there were 597,000 out of work in March, 1958, when both population and working force were substantially smaller, it appears quite possible that the total next March may approach the million mark.

But of one thing you can be sure the government will pull out all the stops to try to keep the figure substantially below the one million mark. A million unemployed, 15 per cent of all workers, would have a psychological impact that could be calamitous to the administration.

The thing about this summertime unemployment that disturbs me is the thought that we may be in a recession and don't know it.

It is all very well for Prime Minister Diefenbaker to say, as he did in a national broadcast last week, that this is "a period of general prosperity." True, the country seems quite prosperous. But how much of this prosperity is due to industry and individuals living on fat?

Are we so used to prosperity that when contrary evidence appears we can't or won't recognize it? There's not only the unemployment figures. There's the sharp increase in company bankruptcies—31 per cent greater in July than a year ago. And there's the virtual stagnation of the national product. In the second quarter production was lower than it was in the first three months of the year.

The Packback

First in Line

By GREGORY CLARK

IT has been my experience that it is people with nothing but a $10 bill who hustle to get first in line to board a bus or street car where the fare is 10 cents. On rainy days, this is specially true. This leaves the whole queue of people standing in the rain while the bus driver argues with the passenger and then takes a whole minute to make the change.

But there is another type. It is made up of people wanting directions who hustle to get first in line. The more confused they are, the more complicated their enquiries as to how to get to Queen Elizabeth Street, not Queen Elizabeth Drive or Queen Elizabeth Boulevard, the more nimble and determined they are to be first onto the bus.

And there, blocking the queue of all those of us who know where we are going, they stand questioning the driver at great length, producing pieces of paper with notations on them or maps or even groping in their handbags for a letter from Cousin Aggie telling them just how to get to Queen Elizabeth Street.

Now and then you encounter a bus driver who has enough sense to make these inconsiderate people stand aside and come last.

Trade Stagnation

WE are not an unqualified proponent of the "buy Canadian" idea.

Carried to its logical conclusion it would mean a closed market and higher prices—in a country where prices are too high already. World trade would stagnate if all other countries should promote similar programs and natural economies would collapse—including that of Canada.

—WINSTON STARR

"Hot dogs . . . ice cream . . . tranquilizers . . ."

Dag Hammarskjöld

Symbol of Decency and Reason

By MARQUIS CHILDS,
from United Nations

WITH the news roaring with hurricane force from every quarter—the political debate, a new upheaval in the Congo, a man-in-space or not in space—it is a measure of this international civil servant that he should nevertheless still stand well to the centre of the crowded stage. From a small neutral country where he had an expert's status and a relatively unimportant position in his government, Dag Hammarskjöld has become the symbol of decency and reason and the hope that world order may yet evolve out of revolution and chaos.

He has said again, as so often before, that it is not the man who is at issue in this bitter quarrel but the office of secretary-general—the independent, impartial, objective director of the United Nations executive branch. The very fact of his success as an independent, impartial, objective servant of the Security Council has made him the target of the Soviet Union.

Hammarskjöld, as he would be the first to acknowledge, could not conceivably resolve the intrigues of East and West in the Congo. Those intrigues, however much they may be glossed with the color of good intention, go to the roots of power over the great mineral wealth of Katanga Province and the strategic position that the government finally dominating Central Africa will occupy.

But he could, and this is what he has done, deny the use of the UN force to either side. He has undertaken to enforce a standstill until the conflict is somehow resolved. It must never be forgotten that he interposed the UN force at a moment when bloody civil and tribal warfare was about to spread with wild incitement from the inflammable Patrice Lumumba and with the Belgians' recklessly determined to hold actual, if not nominal, control over their wealth in Katanga.

And that tribal-civil war could rapidly have become an international conflict with East and West each stoking the fires with their own military. In this dangerous and difficult endeavor "success" for the UN was bound to be qualified. A checkmate would bring the hostility of one certainly and in all probability both of the parties to this subterranean struggle.

During a wartime conference of Allied leaders a question about the Pope and the position of the Vatican came up and Stalin is said to have demanded to know how many divisions the Pope had. It expressed his cynical disregard for everything but sheer force. Hammarskjöld has no divisions at his disposal but he has a power and a prestige that are immeasurable. Informed opinion here is that he will survive the attack directed at him by Premier Khrushchev. There is, of course, an unhappy precedent in the way in which the Communist bloc succeeded in driving out his predecessor, Trygve Lie. They did this by calculatedly undercutting him in every possible way.

But Hammarskjöld has more stature and more tenacity than Lie and the lines this time are more clearly drawn. He will not surrender. He has the confidence of most of the Asian and African nations as well as the Western powers. If he is destroyed it is hardly too much to say that the UN itself will have been dealt a crippling blow.

His is far from an enviable position. He must surely be one of the most lonely of men. His whole life is the UN and he gives to it virtually every waking moment of his time. While the present attack is more virulent than most, he has been calumniated by the extreme left opposed so much to Hammarskjöld himself as to the secretary-general as a symbol of the effectiveness of the UN, and by the extreme right here in America. Interestingly enough, it is for this same reason that Moscow has set out to destroy him.

He has demonstrated in one situation after another that he can be independent, impartial and objective. For the implacable partisans of either/or, black and white, this is in itself a crime and he must be made to pay for it.

Of late the Eisenhower administration has rested heavily on its love for the UN. But it has stopped short of the really far-reaching support that could move it forward to a new dimension. And while some effort is being made to rally support for Hammarskjöld and the office of secretary-general, which the Soviets would wipe out, this is neither very vigorous nor impassioned. Secretary of State Herter is returning to Washington at a time when his influence might be important with foreign ministers and heads of state.

On the 38th floor of the Secretariat Building it is a little before midnight. The last visitor has gone, the last telephone call has been made, the final memorandum has been dictated. The lonely man who presides there has closed another 17-hour day in the service of the institution to which he has dedicated himself.

Welfare of Women

It was certainly refreshing to read the tribute paid to an outstanding suffragette. I refer to the passing of Estelle Sylvia Pankhurst. It happens I was reared in the vicinity of Holloway Jail, and as a schoolgirl then was met on the gruesome stories of the forcible feeding of these women, who had the courage to voice the injustices meted out to their sex by the very men who, in song and verse, with and without music, drooled them with idiotic sentimentality.

Yes, by all means let us have a statue to them, not one, but many. I would suggest that in every legislative assembly in every state and province of the free world there be benches occupied solely by women dedicated, like the Pankhurst family, to the mental and material welfare of women. These women should have the authority to prevent any ruthless confiscation of a woman's home, property, security or inheritance by the dictates of a man's law, interpreted by them and administered to their advantage.

Such was my experience in the depression days when the home I had established for an unpensioned ex-serviceman was handed to a successful liar and cheat taking advantage of his law. At the same time married women, not breadwinners, held jobs.

Canada's Hope

If only a single factor were needed to graduate Canada into nationhood, that has now been presented through the medium of Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's address to the 15th Assembly of the United Nations.

Challenging, inspiring, and of diplomatic oratory, his speech was filled with constructive suggestion and unassailable truths. He offered Mr. Khrushchev his own words back with great nicety and approval. No one could have listened unmoved by the sincerity, and possibilities towards good, that were the essence of Canada's hope for amity amongst nations, as expressed by John Diefenbaker to a world's representatives.

Non-Vanishing Indian

School, Trade Real Answer To Reserves

By ARCH MACKENZIE
(Second of a Series)

OTTAWA (CP)—Some people argue that Indian reservations should be abolished.

But many Indians—certainly the older generation—are loath to leave.

Dissolution of reservations would be regarded as another link in a chain of broken promises, shattering a land contract meant to last "as long as the sun shines, and the rivers flow."

Integration—which need not involve the disappearance of what Indian culture does remain—depends on education.

The non-Indian requires education too. The old myth—common among Indians and non-Indians—is that the Indian is a ward of the federal government. Only now are some provinces and a handful of municipalities facing up to the fact that they have an equal responsibility, as have Canadians generally.

Besides education, the reservation resident needs a trade, self-reliance and confidence that will help him prosper off the reservation. It is not an easy task in the light of unemployment and the arrival of immigrants who compete with the Indians for jobs.

Keeping in mind that variations among individuals and bands across the country are much more numerous than norms, the Indian must be appraised against this background:

First Great Wrong

The Indian lived by hunting, fishing and gathering. He had no need to adhere to the maxim of work, saving and time that dominates the European culture.

"And of course the first great wrong was that we took the land away from them," says Roderick Haig-Brown, a Vancouver Island magistrate, author and naturalist whose son is married to a young girl of the Kwakiwilt tribe.

Indian affairs officials tend to agree that the reservation and the treaty kept the memory of the conquest so green that it hampered Indian readjustment.

Destruction of the culture of the Indians sapped their sense of pride, a process intensified by the unconcealed scorn of the more aggressive non-Indian pursuing his materialistic goals.

Anthropologists say the Indian migrated to this country across the Bering Strait in slow human waves over thousands of years—some Asian tribes settling in the Arctic where the Eskimo survives and some as far south as the Argentine.

Ontario and British Columbia have the most Indians, who fall into 11 main language groupings, six of them in B.C. There are none in Newfoundland where the peaceful Beothuk—were exterminated like rats. Prince Edward Island has 400, Nova Scotia 3,500, New Brunswick 3,200, Quebec 20,500, Ontario 42,500, Manitoba 23,200, Saskatchewan 23,000, Alberta 19,500, B.C. 36,500, Yukon 2,000, Northwest Territories 5,000.

Vacant and Useless

There are 2,208 reservations, some small and unoccupied—many economically useless. There are also 25 areas in the Northwest Territories and Yukon set aside for Indians.

The Indian holds his native status if he is on the central register kept in Ottawa at the Indian affairs branch, part of the citizenship and immigration department.

Generally, he is subject to federal, provincial and municipal laws but he pays no tax on reservation property nor income tax on money earned on the reserve. Today, most income is earned off the reservation.

Federal voting privileges, previously restricted to war veterans and their wives or those who elected to drop their Indian status—and few did—were granted this year to all Indians of voting age.

But most adults bitterly oppose this move as a trick to snatch their special Indian status from them, despite assurances to the contrary from the federal government.

Only P.E.I., New Brunswick, Quebec and Alberta now prevent the Indian from voting provincially. They also bar him from any consumption of beer or liquor. He has liquor rights—limited or whole—in the Northwest Territories, B.C., Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Nova Scotia.

Freshman Dies During Hazing

MONTREAL (CP)—Michael Levine, 17, a freshman at Sir George Williams University, collapsed and died Friday during freshman initiation ceremonies.

He was arraigned by senior students in a mock trial and sentenced to run along a downtown street.

The warranty of all 1961 passenger cars built by Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited will be for 12,000 miles, or one full year, whichever comes first.

The 1961 lines of all Ford of Canada passenger cars will bring to the Canadian market the finest automobiles ever produced by this company. Every Ford, Falcon, Monarch, Mercury, Meteor and Comet has been styled, designed, engineered and manufactured with three primary goals in mind: (1) finest quality; (2) greatest durability; (3) most reliable operation.

So confident are we of the success of our efforts to achieve these goals that the written warranty on all 1961 cars produced by Ford of Canada will be 12,000 miles, or one full year, whichever comes first.

Dealer introduction of the 1961 Ford, Monarch and Falcon cars will be on October 6. Introduction date for the Mercury and Meteor is October 7, with Comet on October 20.

Lincoln-Continental will be introduced on November 3, with Thunderbird on November 10 and these two automobiles will carry the same warranty.

We urge every prospective purchaser of a new car to visit his Ford of Canada dealer and learn all about the dealer's new 12,000-mile, or one full-year warranty.

Weather's Moods Affect Weak, Underfed People

Let Barometer Drop We're In for Storm

By LELORD KORDOL

(Sixth of a Series)

The persons who coined the old adages, "The darkest hour is just before the dawn" and "Every cloud has a silver lining," were undoubtedly integrated personalities.

The weak, underfed or defeated personality has a completely different outlook on life.

He sees failure in temporary setbacks, his gloomy days outnumber by far the ones of fair weather and a genuine storm or crisis results in panic for him.

SOME EXTENT

Scientists agree almost everyone's personality is affected to some extent by the weather.

Mark Twain said: "Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it."

But W. Wesley Hicks is trying!

PIONEER STUDIES

He's a San Francisco manufacturer of electric heaters, who has pioneered studies on the effect of the weather upon your personality.

Mr. Hicks predicts: "We are on the verge of one of the great breakthroughs in man's knowledge of himself and our atmosphere."

"The results could affect every living creature on earth."

VARY DIRECTLY

Our personalities tend to vary directly with the barometer.

Normal barometric pressure at sea level is about 30. When the barometer reads 30 or more and rises or remains steady, our spirits do the same. The weather is clear and calm and our moods correspond.

IN FOR STORM

But let the barometer drop below 30 and continue dropping, we're in for a storm... of the elements and of the emotions.

Our personality nose-dives with the barometer! If you want to find out spasm in the smaller arteries, and improves the tone of the heart by decreasing its oxygen requirement."

Of the five factors of blood pressure — volume of blood, viscosity or thickness of the blood, the strength of the heartbeat, the elasticity of the vessel walls and peripheral resistance — the one chiefly involved in blood pressure is peripheral resistance.

Vitamin E lowers the resistance to the flow of blood by relaxing the terminal vessels (arterioles) which are in spasm.

"By understanding your body's cooling system," I said, "you realize that there is a way of eating that benefits you during the summer."

The body's main thermostat is the hypothalamus — a gland at the top of the spinal column — which is sensitive to the blood-sugar level as well as to the temperature surrounding the body. As the fuel foods affect the hypothalamus, it "tells" the blood vessels to enlarge.

USE HONEY

To keep this thermostat operating, use honey instead of sugar, cut out the starches, eat more of the high-protein foods: meat, fish, poultry, eggs and low-fat cheeses.

RIGHT CHOICE

"How about keeping my thermostat operating efficiently during all the seasons?" asked Gil.

"Protein is still the answer," I said. "And by keeping your hypothalamus operating well, you fortify your body for any predicted bad weather by the right choice of food."

TEAMSTER BOSS HOFFA
... It's a sad day

Hoffa Predicts in Vancouver: Workers Will Rebel Against CCF Alliance

VANCOUVER (CP) — Teamsters president Jimmy Hoffa predicted Thursday that workers will rebel against the CCF-labor alliance in Canada.

"It is a sad day when union leaders use their high office for political aspirations and seek power to form a new type of government," Hoffa told some 1,200 people at a rally of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. He warned union members not to let nationalism stand in the way of a united labor front with United States teamsters.

The alliance, backed by the same Canadian Labor Congress that has expelled the teamsters for raiding, was never the intention of union members when they elected Hoffa, he said.

"I believe working men and women will rise up in revolt against such a thing."

He condemned union leaders "who would rather see their names on the social pages Nov. 23 in the ridings of Joliette and Rouville. Nomination Day will be Nov. 9."

Hoffa, here for two days of talks with local teamsters, drew a round of applause when he pledged the financial resources of the 1,600,000-member brotherhood to B.C. teamsters in future strike action or to "fight any employer who defies your right to bargain for you and your family."

Chamber Fights 'Eroding' Laws

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce will ask the government not to pass or change any legislation that would lower the standards of professional groups in the province. E. E. Pearman, who presented the resolution to the directors, said there had been a tendency among various provincial governments to allow a gradual erosion of professional restrictions which were designed to protect the general public from unscrupulous or incompetent professional people.

Byelections Set

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage announced Friday by-elections will be held Nov. 23 in the ridings of Joliette and Rouville. Nomination Day will be Nov. 9.

Filter Tips Increase Danger

GLASGOW (Reuters) — Filter-tip cigarettes, far from decreasing the danger of lung cancer, actually increase it, a doctor told a medical meeting yesterday. Dr. Samuel Lipetz, a general practitioner and lecturer at Edinburgh University, said filter tips increase the danger because they make it possible to smoke more of the strongly impregnated tobacco nearest the butt.

No Color TV For Canada

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada is not yet ready for color television, the Board of Broadcast Governors announced Friday, because of "changing techniques and the slow acceptance of color in the United States."

Servers Guild Gathers

More than 300 members of the Servers Guild of the Diocese of B.C. of the Anglican Church of Canada from 42
Vancouver Island parishes will hold their 10th anniversary conference in Victoria next weekend.

The three-day convention will begin Friday at 6.15 p.m.
with a banquet in Christ
Church Cathedral Memorial Hall.

Holy Communion will be held in the cathedral at 7.30 a.m. Saturday followed by breakfast and the annual meeting and election of officers.

During the afternoon outdoor activities and sightseeing tours will be arranged. A dance will be held in the evening.

New officers will be inducted at the 11 a.m. service Sunday in the cathedral.

The Vancouver Island group was formed in Victoria in September, 1950, with eight members, and has now blossomed to a membership of 350, serving in most Island centres.

Warden James C. Robertson said yesterday: "Our members are eager and willing at all times to help the parish, whether it be manual labor or spiritual labor."

Poor Concoction

Trivial 'Janus' Play to Forget

By BERT BINNY
Every theatrical organization has its up and downs, but it is particularly unfortunate when a low point occurs at the beginning of a new season.

This seems to be the case with the Victoria Theatre Guild, which opened its 1960-61 season with "Janus" at Langham Court Theatre last night.

"Janus" is a poor concoction of illogical, inconsequential and weary events, glossed over with some smart-alecky lines presumably intended to indicate wit. For those who like a sort of adult fairy story having only the most tenuous association with reality,
"Janus" is their dish.

However, there are consistently delightful and convincing performances by G. E.

M. Hewlett as Dancy and by Don Ross as Mr. Harper.

Nora Kellie as Miss Addy was disappointing after her inspired playing in last ses-son's "The Constant Wife," and the character of Jessica, played by Helen Peaker, lacked backbone.

Direction appeared to have sacrificed the wood for the trees. There was a phenomenal amount of trivial dithering about. Whether responsibility for this lay with director,
Phyllis Dudgeon or author
Carolyn Green or both is hard to say.

"Janus" continues tonight and all next week at 8.15 at Langham Court Theatre—an evening of easy-to-forget entertainment.

Colonist Feature Race Has Experts Guessing

How good is Dark Turris? Can Ladner Beauty carry an extra six pounds? Can a three-year-old, Little Shay, beat the best stock at the track? Is Severance completely recovered from the slight injury incurred during last Saturday's Premier's Handicap?

Those are questions which will be answered in the featured Colonist Handicap today at Sandown Park.

To be run over the mile and 70 yards, the Colonist Handicap has drawn a field of seven and contention, as they say and as it should be, is deep.

LIKED DISTANCE

Ladner Beauty ran fourth in the six-furlongs Inaugural Handicap on opening day, took to the extra distance as expected last Saturday to win the Premier's Special at a mile, with Jim Broomfield replacing George Miller, in the Irons.

Today, the Jim Halket-trained six-year-old picks up six pounds and gets Al Sherman instead of Broomfield, who will try for the big share of the $800 purse on Severance.

Severance, Don Carley's English-bred grey gelding, won the Inaugural Handicap but was disqualified and placed second for lugging in during the stretch run. Last Saturday, Severance threw a shoe and was first reported out of action for the season but closer examination showed no serious injury.

CHARGING WIN

Dark Turris, one of Red McKendrick's fit stable, was a five-time winner on the Prairie this season and seven-year-old gelding showed just why on Sept. 23 by charging to win the Port Alberni Claiming against the likes of Silver Leaves, Baraloy, Kaceta and Penworth. His times of 1:39.3-5 is the best yet for the mile this meeting and the extra 70 yards should be a boon.

But bettors have to take second thoughts about not backing three-year-olds against older stock. Little Shay looks like a good one. The Conn Stable's youngster was beaten only two lengths in the Inaugural Handicap, and was in the battle all the way in last Saturday's feature before

Everybody Looks Twice When Broomfield's Aboard

By JIM TANG

Where everything else is even, or even reasonably close to even, at Sandown Park this meeting, Jim Broomfield is making the difference.

Second to Bud Giamelli, 87 winners to 72, at Vancouver this season, Broomfield looks like an absolute clinch to win riding honors at the Sidney track.

There is no gainsaying that after eight days of the 14-day meeting the 30-year-old Broomfield has satisfied regulars that he is worth several lengths. His record speaks for itself.

In eight days, Broomfield has accepted 45 mounts. He has won on 11, placed on 15 and showed on six. And he has been getting better. During the last four days of racing he won five races, placed in 11 others and showed in five. Of the five times he failed to place in the first three he was fourth four times.

All this, of course, has been duly noted and Broomfield's mounts often get undeserved support. Despite this he has been up on only 12 mutual choices, something which can only show that he isn't on top just because he has been getting the best horses.

Just the same, there are times when bettors feel that even Broomfield can't make it up—like with Eddie J. ($16.70), Pixie's Ark ($13.40) and several outsiders he brought close enough for place money. And like yesterday, when he was somehow persuaded to ride Jimmy Wish in the seventh race.

NO VICTORIES

There wasn't much to beat, it is true, with the eight starters showing a combined total of no victories this year. But about the most unlikely of an unlikely lot was the six-year-old chestnut gelding Broomfield had elected to test his skill on.

No one knew whether or not Jimmy Wish had ever won before. The form showed he hadn't started last year and had eight previous starts this season. He went to the post at Longacres at 219-1 in July, finished last and beaten by 20 lengths. His three subsequent starts, the last one at Sandown, showed him beaten by 15, 19 and 10 lengths.

GOING AWAY

So, yesterday, he won going away by two lengths. The straight payoff of $29.20 was only a tribute to the support given Broomfield. And the same could be said about the quinnella return of $113.60.

It came about when Chief Remhl, who had never been closer than six and a half lengths in his last 10 starts, got the place money. Sure, it was by far the biggest quinnella return of the meeting but it wasn't $200 or more. Only numbers players and/or Broomfield backers could have figured that one.

Otherwise, it was a rather formful day although Pro Tick was beaten and Bob's Reward ran back to his first Sandown performance after being beaten by 16 lengths Wednesday.

HUSTLED

Hustled from the gate by Jockey Fernando Auger, Bob's Reward grabbed the rail with Frenchco Tinda, starting on the inside of Lady J., preventing the favorite from getting to the front.

Lady J., at her best on the front end, ran a fine race in spite of having to take the long route but couldn't quite get up to the winner, who paid a juicy $15.90.

Pro Tick had the same experience. Another who likes to get the lead, he ran second almost all the way. Bobby McCormack got the jump with Bro. Chas. and the eight-year-old grey didn't let anyone challenge seriously.

Rugged Roughies Give Esks Scare

EDMONTON—A fourth-quarter touchdown by Jackie Parker gave Edmonton Eskimos a 9-2 victory over Saskatchewan Roughriders and second place for sure in the Western Interprovincial Football Union here last night in the bitterest defensive battle of the season.

The upstart Riders, a solid and dangerous club now, mauled the mighty Esks for three quarters last night, and with eight minutes left to play actually had a 2-1 lead as they cepted a pass and Esks worked their way down for Chapman's final single.

Tonight, Calgary Stampeders play the Bombers in a televised (channels 2 and 6 at 6:30 p.m. in Victoria) game at Winnipeg.

SIXTH STRAIGHT

Victory was six straight for the Esks, and left them in a position to take dead aim at the first-place Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who are two points ahead. Both clubs have five games left and meet once more, Oct. 17, in Edmonton. At the moment, the Esks are four points ahead in the for-and-against column that will decide first place if the teams finish tied for the lead.

Riders got a rough break early. Quarterback Bob Patek suffered a pulled muscle in his right ankle in the first quarter, and second-stringer Don Allard was not dressed. That left things squarely in the hands of Canadian quarter Ron Adam, who performed nobly.

RIDERS AHEAD

Eskimos had a 1-0 lead in the second quarter on a single by Vic Chapman, but Ferd Burket got that one back with a punt before the half ended, and Reg Whitehouse put Riders ahead early in the third quarter after Jack Gotta intercepted Parker's pass at the Edmonton 34.

With Esks dropping Parker's passes, fumbling kicks and generally looking like a semi-pro team, Riders held grimly or to their lead. But with less than nine minutes left to play, Parker got the club moving in its old style.

THREE FIRST DOWNS

Starting from their own 47-yard line, Esks made three first downs on three carries by Johnny Bright, Mike Lashuk and Parker. Then it was Parker for nine, Lashuk for five, Bright for six, then four more, and Parker on a roll-out for the touchdown.

Tommy-Joe Coffey kicked the convert that made it 8-2. Riders had one more try left in them. Adam passed 53 yards from his own two-yard line to Bobby Renn, but on the next play Don Stephenson intercepted a pass and Esks worked their way down for Chapman's final single.

Another failure by 22-game winner Vern Law, already named for the opening series games, got odds-makers to wondering.

Law was belted for three first-innings runs, left under fire in the third, when the Braves scored five times to salt it.

Law and his successors just couldn't handle Hank Aaron, who hit his 39th and 40th home runs and two doubles. The spurge, good for five runs

Fivepin Comes of Age

By JIM TAYLOR

Fivepin bowling in Greater Victoria came of age last season with one major step — affiliation with the B.C. Fivepin Association. Now the Victoria Association wants to make that tie even stronger.

A general meeting of the Victoria Fivepin Association will be held tomorrow at Newstead Hall, 724 Fort Street, starting at 1:30 p.m., and delegates from all leagues in the area are asked to attend.

It would seem that bowlers can do nothing but help themselves by joining the association, which this season is concentrating on local development rather than trying to take in the entire Island bowling picture. For $1 per team, a league can join up, and in the process become affiliated with both the B.C. association and the Western Canada body.

Biggest advantage is that through affiliation city bowlers will be eligible to compete with teams all over Western Canada through mail match tournaments and see just how they rate. Last year city high school students won the Western Canada mixed and boys' team events under a similar setup.

A large attendance is needed at tomorrow's meeting so that a slate of officers can be elected who will be representative of city-wide fivepin bowling. The present executive committee at least send a delegate to sit and listen, even if the league does not at the moment plan to join.

No one can lose, and your league might benefit.

Esquimalt Bowling Alleys plans a five-game Thanksgiving Day doubles competition for merchandise and cash prizes. Shifts roll at 11 a.m., 1, 3 and 5 p.m., with handicaps based on a 500 scratch per team.

An effort is soon to be made by Gibson's Bowladrome to start a Classic League three-man tenpin league for bowlers of 165 average and higher. Good.

HOLLERED LOUDLY

City senior tenpin bowlers spent much of the past week screaming "lies" and "propaganda" after last week's suggestion here that their leagues could stand a shake-up. Gibson's senior league, now moved intact to Aurora Lanes, points out that only one bowler of 65 in last year's league averaged under 150, and that 54 were averaging 160 or more. They apparently resented the idea that their leagues should be limited only to the city's best bowlers, as they were supposed to be in the first place.

It was not intended here to step on anyone's bowling shoes. But the fact remains (and alley proprietors and a good number of bowlers agree) that no bowler who can't average 165 or better belongs in a senior league. Senior scratch competition is for the best bowlers, and no one can call a 150 or even 160 average good for a senior league when the national ABC average for all leagues last year was 150 and is believed to be higher this year.

Those figures supplied by the senior league show that last year the town's best bowler had a 190 average; four were in the 180's and 22 in the 170's. What's to stop those 27 from competing in a four or five-team Classic League or a Classic three-man team league with 170 as the cutoff point?

Then Victoria would have a senior league that meant something. Right now they are little better than commercial leagues operating under a different name.

All of the worthwhile league scores turned up in the five-pin leagues this week.

At Gibson's, Walt Creed had 849 (335), J. Bowers rolled 816 (322); Ced McRae had 758 (301) and Will Michell bowled 756 (323). Top bowlers at Strathcona were Scotty Robinson, 805 (343); Derek Leonard, 768; Hugh McWhirter, 764; and Dave Allan; while Russ Bird, 766 (339) and Irene McKay, 717, were the best at Capital City.

Marg Goldie set a season high three for ladies of 805 (340) at Esquimalt Bowling Alleys. Other high scorers were Reg Waggoner, 811 (325); Emil Liska, 799 (308); Harry Smith, 783 (304); Al Jorki, 787; Bob McLeod, 770; Frank Fairless, 763; and May Wallis, 761.

Might Be Mistake

Will Pirates Use Groat?

Dick Groat may be ready to play in the world series, but would the Pittsburgh Pirates be wise to use him?

That's the question some baseball men are asking with the opener against New York Yankees just five days away, and they have the query up with some solid logic.

Groat, solid contender for the National League hitting honors with a .324 average, is a strong candidate for most valuable-player honors, and has always been the rallying force behind the Pirates. But Groat hasn't swung a bat in anger since Sept. 6 when he broke his left wrist. Meanwhile his replacement, Dick Schofield, has been hitting a cool .400 and fielding brilliantly.

SOME DOUBT
A veteran National League expressed the belief that playing Groat in the series would be a mistake.

"Even if he were recovered from the injury," he said, "I don't see how he can walk out on that field after a month's layoff and perform to the best of his ability."

SOLD OUT
In New York, Yankees announced that only standing room is available for the three world series games at Yankee Stadium. This excludes the 14,000 bleacher seats sold each game day.

And while Yankee fans prepared to converge on the stadium, Casey Stengel threw a smoke screen around his choice of starting pitcher for Wednesday and spent his time studying scouting reports on the Pirates and listening to ex-Pirate Dale Long and veteran national League catcher Jim Hegan.

EVEN ROOKIE
Stengel has mentioned Art Ditmar, Bob Turley, Whitey Ford and even rookie Bill Stafford as possible starters during the past week, but most observers believe he will settle on Ford.

Ford, despite his 12-9 season's record, has been the "stopper" for Yankees all season and has always been Stengel's favorite series starting choice. He opened for Stengel in 1955, 1956, 1957 and 1958, and has started more series games, 12, than any other Yankee.

Yankees are reconciled to the fact that they will have to do without catcher Elston Howard for the first two games in Pittsburgh. Howard has an injured finger but may be available as a pinch-hitter.

Pender Signs

BOSTON (AP) — Paul Pender, two-state and European world middleweight champion, will meet Marcel Pigou in a 10-round non-title fight Nov. 5 at the Boston Arena.

Saw Removed

Detectives Admit Search Made Without Warrant

Charge by a city man that two detectives entered his room without a search warrant was laid before Victoria Police Commission yesterday.

After hearing testimony concerning the incident, which occurred last May 20, the commission reserved judgment.

TWO NAMED

Jens Kibsgaard, 706 Blanshard, testified he was lying on his bed reading when Dets. Angus Munro and Deans Blackstock opened the door and walked in.

They identified themselves as police officers and admitted they had no search warrant, but took with them a $40 power saw which was later returned, said Mr. Kibsgaard.

MAN SEEN

Det. Munro's version, confirmed by Det. Blackstock, was that a number of power saws had been reported stolen and they had gone to Kibsgaard's room to investigate a report that a man was seen wandering around with a power saw in the early hours of the day.

Kibsgaard's door was open and he made no objection when they spoke to him, said Det. Munro.

SLIP MISSING

They could see the saw in his room and Kibsgaard permitted them to take it away when he could not find a sales slip.

Other detectives subsequently learned the saw actually had been purchased by Kibsgaard and it was returned to the man, said Det. Munro.

Lawyer Lloyd McKenzie, appearing for the two detectives, termed the whole thing a "tempest in a teapot."

W. H. M. Haldane, appearing for the complainant, told the commission that the detectives "had embarked on a conduct that was not justifiable."

Fall Session Not Likely

A fall session of the legislature is possible but unlikely, Premier Bennett indicated yesterday.

The provincial government, he told a press conference, is going to press in Ottawa for co-operation in the creation of jobs, and "if the government needs any additional authority to carry out B.C.'s undertakings, if we should advance that far, we wouldn't hesitate to call a session."

"But there will be a session in January in any case, and that's not far away."

Liquor Store Open In Colwood Today

New government liquor store at Colwood. Corner will open its doors for the first time at 10 a.m. today. Two men will be employed for a start.

The store will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. each day except Fridays when it will close at 9 p.m. and Sundays when it will not be open at all.

Bennett's Problem

Cabinet Changes Will Take Time

By R. O. MARRION

Post-election changes in B.C.'s cabinet aren't likely in the immediate future, Premier Bennett indicated yesterday.

"It takes time," he said at a press conference, to make decisions in a matter like this. Political observers see three ways the premier can close the gap left by the defeat of Labor Minister Lyle Wicks and Agriculture Minister Newton Steacy.

SEATS OPENED?

Seats comparatively safe for Social Credit can be opened by resignations, for Mr. Wicks and Mr. Steacy to seek in by-elections, new men can be brought into the cabinet or the portfolios of Mr. Wicks and Mr. Steacy can be transferred to re-elected ministers in addition to portfolios they already hold.

NO RESIGNATIONS

But at least for the time being, Mr. Wicks and Mr. Steacy are expected to remain ministers. Neither has yet announced he will resign.

Premier Bennett will leave Tuesday for a visit to New York and after that will attend a federal-provincial conference in Ottawa in late October.

Steacy, Wicks Stay On

although, he said, he may return to Victoria meantime.

He is going to New York to "help bring capital and encourage industry to move to British Columbia," he said. "What we are trying to do is create jobs and get industry, and that takes money. It's amazing how many thousands of dollars it takes to create one job."

Fire Permits Still Needed

Permits will still be required by residents wishing to do any burning in Central Saanich.

Under normal conditions permits would not have been required after yesterday.

Fire department officials say dry conditions in the municipality make it necessary for a close watch to be kept on all burning operations.

Smooth Trip for Sign Law Sunk by City Hall Attacks

The city planning staff's hopes of smooth sailing for a fourth draft of a sign bylaw abruptly sank yesterday in public works committee.

All three members in contrast with Mayor Percy Scurrell, who "sat in"—found fault with it.

Esquimalt

Booming Protest Readied

Final plans for a mass protest by View Royal residents against a booming ground lease in Esquimalt harbor will be discussed at a meeting of the newly-formed upper Esquimalt harbor district committee Sunday at 8 p.m. in View Royal Community Hall.

A petition is being prepared, along with a brief, for a special hearing Oct. 12, said Joseph Sutherland, chairman of the new group.

Residents are protesting a lease application by the Greater Victoria Mill Owners' Association for a booming ground in Esquimalt harbor above Cole Island.

"If they get the lease, they will have practically the whole harbor above Cole Island for a booming ground," the chairman said.

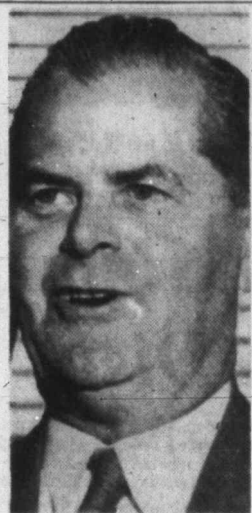

More than 40 View Royal residents attended a formation meeting of the new group last Sunday.

City Rolling Up Record In Construction Values

PREMIER BENNETT

He also—he admitted with a grin—hopes to take advantage of the opportunity to see one or two world series games.

The San Francisco office the government hopes to establish to lure industry, capital and tourists to B.C. can't be set up until the legislature provides the money for it, the premier said: "I hope we'll start right after the beginning of the fiscal year."

Third Ferry, Too

B.C. Pledges Gift For City Birthday

The provincial government "certainly" will assist Victoria city in celebrating its 100th birthday in 1962, Premier Bennett said yesterday.

He told a press conference the province won't want to interfere, but hopes the celebration will be a big one.

Mayor Percy Scurrell welcomed the premier's assurance of aid, and also expressed hope of a big celebration.

WAIT FOR ELECTIONS

But he reiterated that he won't appoint a committee to prepare for the centenary until after the December civic elections, because otherwise the aldermen appointed might not still be on council in 1962.

Premier Bennett said tenders for an additional government ferry may be called as soon as a month from now.

Plans of the existing ferries are being reviewed for slight improvements which, he said, are "bound to" be found.

READY FOR CENTENARY

The new ferry, he noted, will be ready for the city's centenary and for the 1962 World Fair in Seattle which he anticipated will bring "thousands and thousands of extra tourists to Victoria."

1,300 Tickets Still Remain For Big Bingo

Only 1,300 tickets are left for the 21st giant bingo night in Memorial Arena, arranged by Victoria Kinsmen's Club for Monday.

Sales, to 5 p.m. yesterday, totalled 6,200 — about 1,000 more than for any previous bingo, Jack Phillips, bingo committee chairman, said last night.

Reduction of the stage area and rearrangement of the seating plan have made 250 more seats available on the floor of the arena, he added. The extra tickets will be sold at Eaton's box office from 9 a.m. this morning.

Tickets will be sold from the box office up to 5 p.m. Monday. From 7 p.m. any remaining seats will be sold at the arena.

Up to $10,000 is offered in cash prizes for the evening. Top prizes are games worth $1,000 each, and consolation prizes of $10 each are offered to all semi-finalists who lose out in final games.

Courts Big Boost, Saanich Lagging

Victoria city so far is having its best building year—in dollar value—in the past two decades, and probably in history.

Roderick Clack, head of the planning and inspection division, looked back yesterday through the records of the last 20 years and failed to find a total to match the value of building permits issued by the city in the first nine months of this year—$7,407,604.

LAW COURTS HELP

Total to the end of September last year was $6,512,258.

A permit for the new law courts swelled the September figure to $2,008,759, compared with $908,794 in September last year, but Mr. Clack said, "We have preliminary plans in the office now for further substantial work."

NOT FAR BEHIND

Saanich was not far below last year's level in September.

During the month, the municipality issued 99 permits with a value of $772,620, including 27 dwellings at $352,250, compared with 99 permits totalling $836,250 last year, including 58 dwellings at $682,500.

NINE-MONTH TOTALS

Nine-month Saanich totals this year were 691 permits and $5,105,970, including 281 dwellings at $3,365,150. Last year the totals were 908 permits for $7,202,679, including 509 dwellings at $5,856,460.

Esquimalt figures were well down: 23 permits in September with a value of $23,085, compared with 17 the previous September with a value of $169,940.

Nine-month totals this year

September Weather Typical

September was a typically late, summer month for weather.

Temperatures ranged from a low of 46 on Sept. 2 to a high of 78.2 on Sept. 11 and the average temperature was 55.7 as compared to an average 57.4 in past years.

There were 215.4 hours of sunshine, bringing the year's total to 1,983.7 hours. Normal for the month is 214.2 hours and for the year to date 1,933.6 hours.

Year's rainfall total now stands at 14.31 inches, 4.5 less than normal. In September, .72 inch was recorded, .56 less than normal for the month.

Tommy Toots to Stay With Evicted Master

By PETER BRUTON

CATASTROPHE: Caretaker Bill Hilton celebrated his 82nd birthday Thursday by being told he had to give up his Blanshard Street cabin where he's lived for 38 years.

His first thoughts were not of himself but of his beloved cats, all four of them.

"I'd hoped to and my days here," he told officials of the City Protection League as he tearfully explained his problem yesterday. "Can you find a home for my cats?"

The League quickly found a place for three of the pets but Bill adamantly refused to give up the fourth—a two-year-old ginger animal he calls Tommy Toots.

The old man remained in his cabin again last night, alone except for the company of Tommy Toots, but he must leave today. They want the land for a parking lot.

He hasn't the faintest idea where he will go today.

"But I'm not giving up Tommy Toots," he said.

SPEAKING OUT: B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Hugh Keenleyside is a trifle reluctant to accept invitations to speak to groups following a recent upland experience.

He agreed to speak to a club but had to cancel at the last minute.

An item in the local newspaper later reported that the audience was "pleasantly surprised" when they found Dr. Keenleyside would be replaced as a speaker by a Vancouver newspaper columnist.

SIGN OFF: Fisgard Street butchers Wally Stewart and Archie Hubbard are going to be a little more careful when wording signs in the future.

A placard in their shop window yesterday proclaimed: "Venison, 5 cents a pound, cut, wrapped and frozen for your freezer." Then the invasion began.

Seems most people didn't realize they had to provide the

BILL HILTON ... last night at home

venison themselves. Sign was soon amended by writing a big "Your" in front of the word "venison."

The two said they've had "scores of deer" brought in so far but the biggest single order was a 1,000-pound moose, frozen solid.

DINNER GUEST: Patrons of the weekly smorgasbord at the Empress Hotel Thursday were treated to a dramatic floor show when a tabby cat stalked into the dining room and proceeded to accept titbits from the diners.

The cat neatly frustrated attempts by waiters to shoo it outside and even the intervention of head waiter Peter was thwarted.

After a sumptuous dinner the cat left with other diners, casting a scornful look at the hotel staff.

Gadsden Honored

Capt. B. J. Gadsden, former alderman and long the city's representative on the B.C. Aviation Council, has been named permanent honorary president of the council, the city was informed yesterday.

He has been so honored, the council said, "in recognition of his long-time interest in the advance of aviation in British Columbia and his devoted support of the council in furtherance of its work for the betterment of air transport facilities throughout the province."

Chopped candied fruits, flavored vanilla pudding mix to make the filling of this delicious Nesselrode Pie.

Packaged Pudding For Elaborate Dish

The original Nesselrode pudding combined a very rich custard with a mixture of dried and candied fruit. It took hours to make and was finally packed into a fancy mold and frozen solid. This elegant concoction was the creation of Count Nesselrode Chamberlain at the court of Belgium during the reign of King Leopold the First. And since the palace kitchen was staffed with a fine array of chefs, no one was particularly concerned with the amount of time needed to prepare this delectable pudding.

Today, very few people can spare the time to make this kind of elaborate dessert, but with modern time-saving products, such as packaged puddings, it's possible to prepare delicious, rich-flavored desserts that can taste every bit as good.

TIPS FOR PARENTS

By HELEN HEWSON

Several years ago human beings, especially those who were the parents of small children, were prone to convert medical advice into personal worry.

Mothers became tense and anxious as they strove to shove the needed vitamins and food stuffs into their children. The children closed their mouths firmly and pushed the proffered spoon away.

The more mother fussed, the more firmly the child refused his food.

The battle carried them to the doctor's office with the complaint, "he won't eat."

Appetite is not constant. We all feel less hungry some days than others.

Children, like adults, have their off days, their temporary likes and dislikes and their lean days and fancies may stretch into weeks.

During the past 20 years there has been a good deal of research into the eating habits of children and it has been established that there is a marked falling off of appetite at certain periods.

Perhaps the most worrisome time for young parents comes between the first and second year.

This corresponds to a slowing down in physical growth, to a teething period and to rapid personality development.

This is a time to exercise tact and good sense. To start battling over cereals and vegetables builds up resistance in the mind and feelings of the child that is difficult to overcome.

And it will be carried over into other areas of child-training. Many doctors and psychologists when asked for help with behavior problems find that they stem from eating problems.

To quote Dr. Spock: "The aim is not to make the child eat, but to make the mealtime pleasant, then his natural appetite will come to the surface and he will want to eat."

Visitor Teaches In East Africa

By TERRY FRENCH

Devon to East Africa seemed a natural step for Mrs. Elsie Stockley, headmistress of Bugolobi Primary School in Kampala, Uganda.

Mrs. Stockley is at present houseguest of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wagg, 3906 Cadboro Bay Road. Mrs. Wagg and Mrs. Stockley were school friends in England.

Eleven years ago, Mrs. Stockley, a widow, felt the urge to see more of the world, and for reasons even she cannot entirely explain headed straight for Africa.

ROMANCE

"Perhaps it was the romance of the place, I don't know," she recalls. She remarked that she didn't head for the European continent because of language problems. In Kampala, she teaches in an English language school, but admits to knowing a little Swahili. "Enough to prevent myself from being completely frustrated when trying to make myself understood."

Mrs. Stockley explained that in Uganda there are three types of school: English language schools attended by all Europeans and those Asians and Africans who wish to attend; Asian schools for the different religions, and both government and missionary African schools.

She first taught at a school with an enrollment of 80, but when that number skyrocketed to 700, a new school was built and she was made headmistress. She again is handling an enrollment of 80 at Bugolobi.

BIG CHANGE

In the years she has spent in Uganda, Mrs. Stockley has seen a tremendous surge of development and modernization both in agriculture and industry.

"When I first came, there was little fresh food, only lamps, wood fires and unsatisfactory sanitation." Now there are electric lights, gas stoves, plumbing, fresh foods, even frozen foods and meat.

MRS. STOCKLEY

The development has included the university, too, where many have graduated and done post-graduate work. A typical change is seen in the African's basic diet of maize, sweet potatoes, "mtoi" (a type of banana that is cooked) and some meat from goats and cattle. Now fresh meat and vegetables are imported from the more fertile highlands of Kenya, and local, inferior cattle have been cross-bred with new strains to provide local fresh meat.

An interesting aspect of this Protectorate nestling among the world's hot spots is the complete lack of racial discrimination. "There is none whatsoever," Mrs. Stockley remarked. "Hotels, buses, the cinema, everywhere is open to both black and white, and the schools are definitely interracial."

'Swan' Costs $4,000

By NORA MARTIN

PARIS—Parents who would like to turn a (socially speaking) "duckling" daughter into a shining society "swan" can send her to the swankiest and most exclusive finishing school, the "Academie" in Paris. The price—a hefty $4,000.

Fifteen debutantes from the American and European high society are to start the first term in this swanky de luxe school on October 10. And Mr. Henry Ford's daughter, Charlotte, will be among them.

To get details on the "Academie" we called on Yvonne Boyer, the secretary of the school whose offices are in the Maxims' building in Paris. We learned that the young ladies will not only be turned into a hostess with the mostest and possibly a member of the best-dressed list, but also into intellectually high-spirited students. Formerly called "Maxims' Academie," the school is now in its second, scholastic year and has just added to its program classes in the social graces, the students will also get a diploma from the Sorbonne to prove their intellectual status.

During the school terms from October 10 to June 15, 1961, the debutantes will live the life of young Parisiennes and stay with families of the high French society. This year the number of students is limited to 15 in order to give them personal contact with the teachers who will be professors of the Sorbonne for the morning classes and experts in gracious living of the French society during the afternoons. The students will also be taken to concerts, the theatre and attend parties and balls with the French debs.

HOLIDAYS

Since the young ladies will be staying with French families, some of which are of the aristocracy, everything will be organized for them including a winter sports holiday in Austria during the Christmas vacations and a cruise to Greece next Easter. In Paris they are expected to live like the French students, occasionally taking the subway or bus. During the afternoons the girls will be initiated into French cuisine, taught and shown how to receive guests, dress elegantly and have perfect manners.

"All the students need," the secretary said, "is a grade 12 diploma, some pocket money and clothes. The Academie advises the girls to also bring one or two cocktail dresses and a short as well as a long evening gown. They won't need campus styles, since French students wear city clothes to university."

HIGH SOCIETY

During the school terms from October 10 to June 15, 1961, the debutantes will live the life of young Parisiennes and stay with families of the high French society. This year the number of students is limited to 15 in order to give them personal contact with the teachers who will be professors of the Sorbonne for the morning classes and experts in gracious living of the French society during the afternoons. The students will also be taken to concerts, the theatre and attend parties and balls with the French debs.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann: I've been married less than two months and I work in an office. My husband is a gambler. He will bet on whether or not it's going to rain next Sunday. His favorite form of gambling is the horses and he's flat broke all the time.

He hasn't given me one cent since we've been married. When I ask him for a few dollars he says, "You're working, aren't you?"

I think this is unfair, and I'm seriously considering phoning his boss and asking him to hold my husband's paycheck until I can get there to pick it up.

I realize this wouldn't look too good for my husband, but at this point I don't care how it looks. Can you advise me?

—GAMBLER'S WIFE

Dear Gambler's Wife: If you think you've got trouble now, just phone the boss and ask him to hold your husband's check until you get there. The odds are about 6 to 5 you'll get him fired.

A non-profit organization in the West known as Gamblers Anonymous has done a remarkable job of rehabilitating these sick people. Write for their literature. The San Francisco address is P. O. Box 2738. In Los Angeles, it's P. O. Box 17173 and in Las Vegas (naturally) it's P. O. Box 216. Good Luck—I hope you roll a seven.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a girl 17 who must earn her own money for clothes, school supplies and extras. My parents are divorced and although Dad is supposed to send support money he misses about half the time.

I have a chance to take a job as a car-hop after school and on weekends. My mother claims car-hopping is not a respectable job for a girl. She is against the uniform I would have to wear, and says the tight pants are vulgar and the girls look like chippies.

Mom asked me to write to you for your views. Please be liberal. Thank you.

NEEDING A JOB

Dear Needing: Any honest job is respectable—it's the people who are not always worthy of respect.

Slacks need not look as if they were painted on. If you get a pair that fits properly I see nothing wrong with either the uniform or the job.

Dear Ann: In your column recently you wrote, "Working couples who label money 'His' and 'Hers' like bathroom towels sooner or later run into trouble." I say "Amen, Sister."

Six years ago I married a girl who had an invested income of $100 a month. Two years later he left her for an additional money, slightly larger than my earned income. She keeps her money separate and says "The husband should support his family—regardless."

I do NOT want her principal but I think we should combine our monthly incomes, live within a budget, split the savings and invest it for the family. Comment, please.—TEX.

Dear Tex: Amen, Brother.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Musical Arts Tea Oct. 15

Victoria Musical Art Society will give a membership tea on Saturday, Oct. 15 from 3 to 5 p.m. The affair to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell B. Horton, 3420 Beach Drive, will mark the 30th anniversary of the society.

Premier and Mrs. W. A. C. Bennett, Mayor and Mrs. Percy B. Scurrah, Miss Kathleen Agnew and Mr. and Mrs. Hans Gruber are patrons of the affair.

The tea is for members and their friends and will provide an opportunity to meet each other and the honored guests.

Miss G. Mahaffy, convenor, will be assisted by Mrs. F. W. Jacob and Miss G. Miller.

Court Circular

BALMORAL CASTLE—The Queen was represented by Major-General Thomas Wilson (Secretary, King George's Jubilee Trust) at the memorial service for Lieutenant General The Lord Weeks which was held at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, today.

CLARENCE HOUSE—Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, was present this afternoon at a matinee performance at the Biltmore Theatre. The Lady Fermoy was in attendance.

Families Fend off Bronchitis

A vaccine that is swallowed like an ordinary medicine is credited with relieving all over the world with the relief of sinus, bronchial asthma and nasal catarrh. The vaccine, known as Lantigen 'B', is taken a few drops at a time in water. Once absorbed by the mucous membrane of the nose, mouth, throat and intestines, it stimulates the production of "antibodies," the system's natural soldiers, which attack and destroy the germ and build up the body's resistance.

Benefit Young and Old
Taken regularly, Lantigen 'B' frees breathing, removes stuffy head, relieves congestion. The vaccine is safe even for young people, invalids and the aged, and does not produce harmful after-effects or interfere with other treatments. It is simple and pleasant to take. Recent medical announcements have indicated it is much more convenient in every way to swallow a vaccine than to have it injected.

Grateful Users Testify
Save Wm. Wilkinson of Liverpool: "Three years ago I contracted chronic bronchitis and treatment did not seem to have any effect on me. I decided to try Lantigen 'B'. After the first week's treatment I found to my amazement a wonderful improvement in my general condition. Ask your druggist today for Lantigen 'B' or send for further information by returning the coupon below."

Bride Wears Lace

Mr. and Mrs. William Edward Alder, married recently in an evening ceremony in All Saints' Church, View Royal, have returned from a honeymoon in Oregon and are now making their home at 3066 Tillicum Road.

The bride, the former Carolyn Gladys Pitchford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Pitchford, 1215 Craigflower Road, was given in marriage by her father at a double-ring ceremony performed by Rev. J. W. Forth. Mr. E. Horwood was organist.

She wore a white lace gown fashioned with lily-point sleeves, bow at back and taffeta underskirt. Her veil misted from a coronet of white lace, sequins, pearls and rhinestones. Red roses, white carnations and stephanotis were in her bouquet. For "something borrowed," she wore tiny cultured pearl earrings belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. I. Pitchford.

Mrs. Michael Ridout was matron-of-honor, and wore a queen's blue silk organza gown complemented with headress and bouquet of pink carnations.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Alder, 858 Seymour Avenue, had Mr. Robert Chapman as best man.

A reception was held in the Club Tango, where a three-tier cake made by the bride's mother, decorated the bride's table. White gladioli with pink and mauve dahlias graced the room.

The new Mrs. Alder's going-away outfit was a beige Blin and Blin suit with milk collar, beige and dark brown accessories and a yellow rose and stephanotis corsage.

Garden Notes

Live Dangerously!

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRUIT

In yesterday's column I listed a few varieties of peonies which have shown themselves completely at home in my garden. These are all old-timers — what you might call "safe" kinds, tried and tested under every conceivable growing condition, and I don't suggest for a moment that you should confine your purchases to my list. Select a couple of these surefire kinds by all means, but choose a few of the exciting new varieties too, and live dangerously. Now let's get on with the business of planting them.

Peonies will do well on the east, west or south sides of the house, and the white and pastel shades can even be grown on the north side — the darker shades need a bit more sun. Such a north-facing site must be open to the sky, not overhung by eaves or tree branches, and you'll have fewer flowers and more foliage than in sunnier sites.

Try if you can to avoid making your peony bed anywhere near trees. The shade is only part of the problem — a much more serious drawback is the lack of moisture under trees. Elms and poplars in particular are bad neighbors for peonies, as the roots of these trees seem to have an unholly knack of searching out and exploiting the rich goodness of a peony bed.

It is surprising how much sheer nonsense has been written about the planting of peonies. If you are to believe the average garden book, it is necessary to dig a hole big enough and deep enough to bury a horse and all for a little peony root only big enough to cover your outstretched palm. And I should pause here to remark that a peony root about the size of the palm of your hand is the ideal size for planting.

My reason for being skeptical about digging a huge grave for a little peony root is simply this: these plants are extremely fussy as to their planting depth. The growth buds on the top of the root should be exactly two inches below the soil surface for, if you put them in much deeper than this, you get all leaves and no flowers. If shallower, the roots tend to dry out in summer and may be heaved out of the ground during periods of alternating frost and thaw.

So, if you make a tremendously deep hole, filling it up with broken bricks and chopped sod and all the other odds and ends recommended by the garden books, the soil is sure to settle. Your peony root will sink with it, winding up far too deep for good performance. Moreover, such deep holes will often act as a drainage sump for the rest of the garden, filling up with surface water and drowning your peony roots.

Make your planting holes big enough to take the roots without cramping and try it on for size to see how deep the growth buds will be. Measure — don't guess — for the eye is notoriously inaccurate in estimating depth. If the hole is too deep, add a little soil and pound it down a bit, so the root is resting on firm earth and won't settle.

In common with other fleshy-rooted subjects, peonies are not too keen on manure in the planting site. Mix a little peat moss and bone meal with the fill-in-soil and work this in around the root until the hole is two-thirds full.

Stop at this point and give each root a couple of quarts of water to settle the soil around the root stems. If you have any Dixon's vitamin B1 or Transplantone, add a little to the water. When this drains away, complete the filling in with loose, dry soil and insert a plant label bearing the name of the variety.

Hollywood Today

By Sheila Graham

Garbo Sharing Addams' Eves

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—The unlikely twosome of the season is Greta Garbo and Charles Addams—he draws those wonderful spooky cartoons in the New Yorker magazine. They've been dining and driving!

Major movie studios are striking back at fan magazines indulging in such scare headlines as "Why Rock Hudson can't make love" and "Eddie named father of Liz' child." Pretty strong implications although the actual stories are gooey, and deny the headline premise.

Bing Crosby sighed after son Gary married showgirl Barbara Stuart: "I regret that I have no more sons to give to Las Vegas showgirls." Not for 20 years, anyway! ... Bing is again criticizing, via a current magazine issue, his upbringing of his first four sons, and vows he will raise his sons by Kathy Grant, "much differently."

Paramount will build a new big building to house the numerous projects of Jerry Lewis, who is living it up right now casting 31 beautiful girls for his next movie, "The Ladies' Man."

And Moss Hart was saying at The Four Seasons that Tony Perkins is his personal choice to play him in the film version of his best seller, "Act One."

Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward take the baby and nurse with them to Paris next week for "Paris Blues." This baby is seeing the world—Israel, Greece, Cyprus, Paris, London and Rome.

Doris Day insists on seeing all interviews before publication. Which might cause a decrease in the interviews!

Van Heflin writes from "The Wastrel" in Rome that he finally recovered the luggage he lost when it was misdirected all over northern Italy. But there's still no word on the thieves who stole Sophia Loren's half-million-dollars worth of uninsured jewelry.

Raymond Burr of the Perry Mason series advised Richard Denning, who stars in the Michael Shayne series, "Don't worry about working 18 hours a day. Learn to take catnaps standing up between scenes and you'll live through it." Burr's heavy schedule has sent him to the hospital twice.

Jan Sterling gave up the New York apartment she had kept for 10 years and brought her mother to live with her in Hollywood. Now Jan is apartment hunting all over Manhattan again. Rehearsals for her new Broadway play, "How to Make a Man," start Oct. 12.

Shades of Tab Hunter and his dog trouble! They are saying in London that Tony Armstrong-Jones is the reason for the banishment of Princess Margaret's two cute Sealyhams. She is now leashing only one—her spaniel, Roly. I hope the rumor is true that Margaret is expecting a child. It might shrink the distance to her sister The Queen.

Joseph Cotten has joined the actor no longer in their teens, to put it very nicely, who say, "romantic roles are a bore. I played a one-eyed American war correspondent in 'The Lady Wore Red,' and a vicious drunken rancher in 'The Day of the Gun.' Never had so much fun in my life." Well, the boys tell me, it's still more fun to make love to Lana Turner or Marilyn Monroe.

One reason why Vera Miles was so happy to play the wife in "Back Street" with Susan Hayward and John Gavin—she will get to keep the glamorous wardrobe—her first in pictures. Producer Ross Hunter gave designer Jean Louis $78,000 for 14 ensembles for Vera, simply smothered with mink, sable and jaguar.

The Viewing World

By John Crosby

Issues Got Stuck in Tube

Travel and communications are two great factors of our time that are extremely difficult to grasp — at least for me to grasp. A few days ago I was in East Berlin, watching Berthold Brecht's "The Aufgang of Arturo Ui," a political tract of great power and complexity written and staged by the late Mr. Brecht, who was a Communist.

A few days later I was in New York watching Nixon and Kennedy square off on their political showdown from Chicago. (This is being written in Keene, N.H., just to add another place name.) In the modern world, one does get around. Or, if you don't get to the mountain, the mountain comes to you, via television. The devices for communication and travel are enormously ingenious but this does not make communication any easier and it very well could make it even harder. Or not as well understood.

Sen. Kennedy and Vice President Nixon on their bare stage, with its austere lighting, were ushered in to almost 30,000,000 homes in the United States. But did they really get into the front door? Nixon, for example, spoke — extensively on the economic growth, on the farm problem, on the budget, on other matters. The comment from the listeners—I've heard it many times and read it as well — "He looks haggard." Kennedy spoke most urgently about economic growth and most eloquently about the Republican farm failure (to mention only a few topics). The comment: "He was tense at first, but he got more relaxed."

The words, the issues themselves, got stuck in that electronic tube somewhere. Only general impressions of ease or unease, health or fidgetiness came through. It was a bad fight, slow and cautious, and almost drained of emotion. I thought Kennedy won on points because he thawed out noticeably at the end. But

A moment deeply comforting

A beautiful and dignified funeral creates memories that sustain and solace, helping time soften the sorrow of loss.

Years of devoted service have built our reputation.

Diefenbaker Invites Macmillan to Ottawa

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker Friday night confirmed he has invited Prime Minister Macmillan to visit Ottawa before returning to England from the United Nations.

Mr. Diefenbaker also said he will return next week to New York for a third visit to the United Nations. He said no definite date has been fixed.

Millions More For Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U.S. Friday poured out more than $306,000,000 to strengthen drastically its army and navy missile arsenal.

The navy got $106,000,000 for the submarine-launched Polaris missile, the army pumped an additional $199,125,000 into development of the Nike-Zeus and the air force was given an additional $33,800,000 for the Samos "spy" satellite program.

Neutrals' Summit Bid Puts Squeeze on Ike

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Five so-called neutralist nations, including India, asked Friday that President Eisenhower and Premier Khrushchev meet in a new summit as a "first urgent step" to ease world tension.

President Sukarno of Indonesia introduced the five-country resolution at the end of a long policy speech before the 15th United Nations General Assembly. India's Prime Minister Nehru then requested that it be placed on the assembly's agenda. The proposal was automatically added to the agenda without further discussion.

Sponsors of the resolution are Ghana, India, Indonesia, the United Arab Republic and Communist Yugoslavia. United States observers speculated that the neutralist move placed the U.S. in a tight squeeze since Eisenhower pressed unwillingness to meet while saying he is willing to follow UN guidance in the search for peace—has also exposed Khrushchev face to face until the Soviet leader lets up on attacks against the U.S.

'Still in Same Place' After Talk with Mac

NEW YORK (UPI)—Premier Khrushchev said last night that Russia's relations with the West are right where they were before he met with British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan Thursday night. Khrushchev, answering questions at a reception given by the Afghanistan delegation to the United Nations, agreed with Macmillan's appraisal of the two-hour two-man summit meeting as "calm and reasonable." Macmillan said the session ended in a stalemate. "We are still in the same place," he said. "Everyone is left with his nose and hands in the right place, and his ears, too."

World Demands It, Says Mac

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Macmillan said Friday night there is a chance that East and West will get back into the mood of six months ago before the failure of the Paris summit conference.

In a television interview recorded in New York, where he is attending United Nations sessions, the prime minister said: "What's going to happen? I can't tell you. It may go very badly. It may deteriorate. The Communists may be angry. At the same time, I think there's a chance that we'll get back to the mood which we were in six months ago before the summit conference flopped in Paris.

"I think we could get back to it. It needs a little generosity on everybody's side. It needs a little good sense. It needs a little loss of face, if you like, but I think it's what the peoples of the world want."

Nanaimo Chinatown

Historic 'Village' Demolished In Sea of Flames

NANAIMO—Chinese leaders met to discuss the rebuilding of Nanaimo's Chinatown late last night as the historic, Old West-style village lay in heaps of glowing embers after the most spectacular fire in the Hub City's history.

First estimates of the damage put the total, including loss of personal effects, at more than $200,000.

The number of homeless Chinese reached 250.

BLAZING RUBBLE

The fire broke out about 4.45 p.m. and within two hours most of Chinatown was reduced to blazing rubble. Flames were still gushing from the debris early this morning. At one point other residential areas of Nanaimo were threatened by burning shingles and debris carried by a 15-mile-an-hour wind but the danger eased as the wind dropped.

Dazed old people had to be forced to leave their homes as one after another the old wooden buildings were engulfed in flames shooting hundreds of feet into the sky.

ALL EVACUATED

Despite reports of a fatality, Wallace Chang, president of the Wah Hing Land Company, owners of most of the buildings, said he believed everyone had been evacuated.

Only injury reported was suffered by a spectator who tripped over a hose and cut his head.

The fire started in the back of an unoccupied house at 6 Pine Street.

2,000 SPECTATORS

Flames and smoke billowed high over Nanaimo and it wasn't long before 2,000 persons gathered at the fire.

Many of the Chinese apparently had no intention of leaving their homes, and possessions, but Howard Chang, 20, and his brother Dennis, 17, sparked the drive to get them out by heaving mattresses and blankets out into the street. Many old people were later

Life Savings Lost

Elderly Chinese Sleep Calmly In Army Bunks

By G. E. MORTIMORE and J. T. JONES

NANAIMO—Elderly Chinese removed from their burned homes were helped up the steps of the old Nanaimo army camp by volunteer nurses and St. John Ambulance workers late last night, were issued army blankets, and settled down to sleep calmly in the lower tier of army double-decker bunks.

One old man, wearing only one shoe, refused to let go of the suitcase which he was carrying. Very few brought any belongings out at all. They rested stoically without complaint; some were invalids, some were crippled. A few of them brought only a pair of slippers which were laid beside their beds.

Ma, Bob Weir, officer commanding C Squadron, B.C. Regiment, took charge of reception and relief. He is a reserve army officer and Nanaimo lawyer.

SAVINGS GONE

One little boy, with toy guns and a holster, hung determinedly onto his grandfather and went to sleep beside him. Some of them had lost their life savings which they had been stowing away for many years in tin boxes and under the floors of buildings because they distrusted banks. A woman with a baby strapped to her back, refused to give up charge of the child as she moved out some of her furniture.

NO COMPLAINTS

They didn't complain, they sat quietly and lay uncomplainingly under blankets smelling of mothballs. Many of them had come here to work in the coal mines and had lived here the bulk of their lives. "I remember seeing them file past on their way to work a shift in the mines when I was a kid," said Mrs. Thea Sogor, a St. John Ambulance worker, who kept a vigil on a floor of the dormitory hut.

COUGHS HEARD

A few racking coughs were heard in the dormitory from elderly Chinese with lung trouble. Ten women and two small children were accommodated at St. Ann's convent. Ninety-four people, mainly elderly men, were checked in at the reception centre in the army barracks at the old Camp Nanaimo.

Numbers of people, bewildered by the ordeal, still were hiding in the bush bordering

He was assisted by Dawson Gordon, civil defence controller. Provincial welfare authorities were preparing to take over rehabilitation of evacuees. Within minutes of the tragedy, Mount Benson Legion Branch set up a clearing house for all donations and offers of help. The CCF was planning a fund-raising bing.

Among possessions lost were irreplaceable photographs, passports and other personal papers. For a Chinese approaching pension age, a passport is often the only means of establishing age.

Three Bouncing Balls

DUNCAN — Triplets born yesterday—first here in many years—were reported with their mother to be doing fine.

Proud father J. T. Ball, 5919 Deuchars Drive, said everyone, including his two children at home, is resting comfortably.

The family thanked Dr. Peter Postuk for his attention by naming the first child, a boy, after him.

The babies, in order of appearance, are: Peter, four pounds and 11 ounces, 6.45 a.m.; William, three pounds and 11 ounces, 7.35; and Sandra, four pounds and five ounces, 8.10.

Non-Profit Organization Built, Owned Chinatown

Flames which raced through Nanaimo's Chinatown last night destroyed a unique village-within-a-city, a fenced citadel founded on fair rents.

Only six blocks from the heart of Nanaimo's business section, the privately-owned village covered 12 acres of hilly land.

The toll of the flames will be felt all across Canada—everywhere there is a shareholder in the Wah Hing Land Company which owned the settlement.

INSURANCE CARRIED
Fire insurance was carried, of course, but officials of the company felt their tenants were the best possible fire insurance. From the cradle, Chinese are traditionally taught the dangers of fire.

In Nanaimo's early days many Chinese worked for the Western Fuel Company (Canadian Collieries) and they built up a village on land rented from the company.

RAISED RENTS
About 1910 the company sold the land and the new owners raised rents. The Chinese laborers refused to pay and formed the Wah Hing Land Company to buy the 12-acre site and rebuild the village.

STUCK BALANCE
Rents for some of the older residents of Chinatown were only a few dollars a month—set to strike a fine balance between pride and ability to pay.

Some of them banded together to live in unused stores, sharing communal kitchen facilities.

BUSY AT NIGHT
Like any Chinatown in any city in North America, Nanaimo's Chinatown was busiest at night and in the early morning. The cafe opened, juke boxes blared, residents gathered to play mah jongg, to talk and joke.

The wide town gates in the fence surrounding the village were always kept open. They were more a symbol of the spirit which founded the village than regular gates to keep people out.

GATES OPEN
The gates were wide, open last night, too, as fire engines raced to fight the leaping flames. Charred and blackened wood is all that remains this morning.

That and 12 acres of hilly land and 4,000 shares in the Wah Hing Company. And some 250 homeless Chinese.

It's just about all there was back in 1910.

Not Seen for Three Days

Rescue Poses Comb Woods For Missing Elderly Hunter

Cowichan Man Deaf, Lane

DUNCAN — Cowichan's civilian search and rescue group will cut its teeth today on rough mountain country west of Duncan in search of a 75-year-old hunter lost three days and three nights.

Missing since 10:30 a.m. Wednesday is veteran hunter Albert Hankins, Gibbins Road, who is deaf, has poor eyesight and a bad leg, and who had six shells and his old 30.30 rifle, but no food.

Relatives said yesterday that he had been known to wander off during hunting season, but he never stayed away as long as this. It is believed he is the eldest active woodsman and hunter in the district.

HUNTERS SET
It is not known how many hunters will go out today, but estimates run as high as 20 or 30. Head of the game club's group is Gordon Evans.

Tentative plans were to have searchers go over part of Copper Canyon, Chemainus River, Hill 60, Mount Prevost or Mount Sicker areas just west of here. They will be joined with Chemainus Rod and Gun Club members sweeping through the mountains and valleys north of Chemainus River.

DOG JOINS SEARCH
A tracking dog handled by Mrs. Alan Best, Crofton, was due to work out of the area near the junction of the Copper Canyon and B.C. Forest Service suppression camp roads.

Relatives were stationed on Mount Prevost last night to see if a fire could be spotted. Game Warden William Powkes, leading the search, said last night after giving up two hours after sundown that "it's like looking for a needle in a haystack. He could be anywhere." He led a small party through the five square mile area to Mr. Hankins' known favorite hunting areas.

ALBERT HANKINS with grandson Kerry

REALLY WORRIED
"We're really worried this time," said Mrs. Hankins. "He's been failing so. In the last couple of weeks, specially, he's been getting up at 3 or 4 a.m. which he never did in his whole life."

"He should never have been allowed out of the house," said a son, Joe.

Mrs. Hankins said she expects the worst. He had few shells and matches.

FOUND WANDERING
Last year the elderly man was lost for a day and a night and was found wandering on a road, she said.

The search and rescue group was organized by the Cowichan Fish and Game Association when it was learned this summer that the RCAF's rescue group was to be reduced.

$850,000 Aid Set

QUALICUM — Progressive Conservatives from all parts of the Comox-Alberni riding were told here by Harry McQuillan, M.P., that $850,000 had been earmarked for public works in the area and that a good part of this had already been spent on harbor and river development.

By the end of the fiscal year B.C. will have received some $136,000,000 in federal aid, including $45,000,000 for hospitals, he said.

Mr. McQuillan said that unemployment was a real problem but the government had enlarged the scope of its winter works program and municipalities were availing themselves of this.

HARRY MCQUILLAN ... $136,000,000 for B.C.

Ladysmith Expansion Up to Voters Oct. 20

LADYSMITH — Amalgamation will be the subject of balloting in this village Oct. 20.

Residents of part of Saltair and Victoria Crescent have already signed a petition asking to be admitted into the village limits.

The enlarged area would add 2,000 acres to the village boundaries and increase the population by 600.

At the same time taxpayers will elect a new commissioner for a two-year term to replace W. J. Sanderson who is moving to Victoria.

Salt Shakers, Old Letters Among Hobby Exhibits

NANAIMO — A variety of odd collections are displayed by the Hobby Club in the annual show at Nanaimo's Exhibition Park.

In the fair building, along with the normal scale models and craftwork, are such things as a collection of pretty paper napkins, an assortment of salt and pepper shakers and a bunch of chocolate bar wrappers.

There are envelopes of letters from various expeditions to the Arctic and Antarctic, as well as from expeditionary forces overseas.

The show, which opened Thursday, will close at 10 p.m. today.

Wayne Stephens, chairman of the Hobby Show committee, said, "We must make this show a big success this year because we want it to become a permanent thing."

Cowichan Bay Driver Fined

DUNCAN — Cowichan Bay marina operator Earl P. Macmillan, 47, was fined $150 and had his licence suspended for 30 days after pleading guilty yesterday to a charge of impaired driving.

He said it was the first time he had ever been in court.

Police said Macmillan was arrested Thursday night at Mill Bay. A constable said he saw his vehicle go a considerable distance on the wrong side of the road.

Saw Removed

Detectives Admit Search Made Without Warrant

Charge by a city man that two detectives entered his room without a search warrant was laid before Victoria Police Commission yesterday.

After hearing testimony concerning the incident, which occurred last May 20, the commission reserved judgment.

TWO NAMED

Jens Kibsgaard, 706 Blanshard, testified he was lying on his bed reading when Dets. Angus Munro and Deans Blackstock opened the door and walked in.

They identified themselves as police officers and admitted they had no search warrant, but took with them a $40 power saw which was later returned, said Mr. Kibsgaard.

MAN SEEN

Det. Munro's version, confirmed by Det. Blackstock, was that a number of power saws had been reported stolen and they had gone to Kibsgaard's room to investigate a report that a man was seen wandering around with a power saw in the early hours of the day.

Kibsgaard's door was open and he made no objection when they spoke to him, said Det. Munro.

SLIP MISSING

They could see the saw in his room and Kibsgaard permitted them to take it away when he could not find a sales slip.

Other detectives consequently learned the saw actually had been purchased by Kibsgaard and it was returned to the man, said Det. Munro.

Lawyer Lloyd McKenzie, appearing for the two detectives, termed the whole thing a "tempest in a teapot."

W. H. M. Haldane, appearing for the complainant, told the commission that the detectives "had embarked on a conduct that was not justifiable."

Fall Session Not Likely

A fall session of the legislature is possible but unlikely, Premier Bennett indicated yesterday.

The provincial government, he told a press conference, is going to press in Ottawa for co-operation in the creation of jobs, and if the government needs any additional authority to carry out B.C.'s undertakings, if we should advance that far, we wouldn't hesitate to call a session.

"But there will be a session in January in any case, and that's not far away."

Liquor Store Open In Colwood Today

New government liquor store at Colwood Corner will open its doors for the first time at 10 a.m. today. Two men will be employed for a start.

The store will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day except Fridays when it will close at 9 p.m. and Sundays when it will not be open at all.

Bennett's Problem

Cabinet Changes Will Take Time

By R. O. MARRION

Post-election changes in B.C.'s cabinet aren't likely in the immediate future, Premier Bennett indicated yesterday.

"It takes time," he said at a press conference, to make decisions in a matter like this. Political observers see three ways the premier can close the gap left by the defeat of Labor Minister Lyle Wicks and Agriculture Minister Newton Steacy.

SEATS OPENED?

Seats comparatively safe for Social Credit can be opened by resignations, for Mr. Wicks and Mr. Steacy to seek in by-elections, new men can be brought into the cabinet or the portfolios of Mr. Wicks and Mr. Steacy can be transferred to re-elected ministers in addition to portfolios they already hold.

NO RESIGNATIONS

But at least for the time being, Mr. Wicks and Mr. Steacy are expected to remain ministers. Neither has yet announced he will resign.

Premier Bennett will leave Tuesday for a visit to New York and after that will attend a federal-provincial conference in Ottawa in late October.

Steacy, Wicks Stay On

although, he said, he may return to Victoria meantime.

He is going to New York to "help bring capital and encourage industry to move to British Columbia," he said. "What we are trying to do is create jobs and get industry, and that takes money. It's amazing how many thousands of dollars it takes to create one job."

Fire Permits Still Needed

Permits will still be required by residents wishing to do any burning in Central Saanich.

Under normal conditions permits would not have been required after yesterday.

Fire department officials say dry conditions in the municipality make it necessary for a close watch to be kept on all burning operations.

Ladysmith Asks Aid

LADYSMITH — The provincial government will be asked to help in a $32,000 emergency works program for Ladysmith.

The program outlined at a village council meeting, calls for $20,760 for waterworks, $8,000 for public works and $3,240 for village park development.

Winter works chairman Battie said he expected the work can get underway by mid-October.

Meanwhile, waterworks chairman Tom Strang said that progress has been good on new water mains in the village and about 2,200 feet of eight inch pipe is being ordered for further work on Third Avenue.

DUNCAN — A bee and a panicky wife got John E. Chalmers, 68, of Port Alberni, in trouble but a sympathetic judge got him out yesterday.

Magistrate A. C. Sutton yesterday dismissed a charge of careless driving against Chalmers laid after his car crashed off the Trans-Canada Highway Sept. 9.

Chalmers said a bee entered the car and his wife tried to chase it out with a handkerchief. While jerking her arm from in front of his face she caused him to turn the steering wheel, he explained.

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce is trying to spark local interest in the civic elections in December.

President Donald Cunliffe said that the civic affairs bureau of the chamber would hold a public forum prior to voting day.

The bureau also had a new chairman appointed. He is Noval Schroeder who is the manager of the Bank of Commerce in the Hub City.

Mr. Schroeder replaces Mrs. A. B. Hall who is accompanying her husband on an extended cruise.

DUNCAN — Verle Latham and Frank Kammerie, both residents here, took first and second place in the annual B.C. Lumber Carriers' rodeo at New Westminster recently.

NORTH COWICHAN — Appraised values of the two municipal works yard properties are to be obtained, with the possible result of the erection of one central yard.

QUALICUM BEACH — The first annual meeting and installation of officers of the Vancouver Island Real Estate Board was held recently at the Qualicum Beach Inn and was attended by representatives from firms in Chemainus, Ladysmith, Duncan, Nanaimo, Parksville, Courtenay, Campbell River, Alberni District and Qualicum Beach.

Installing officer was Fred M. Philips, president of the B.C. Association of Real Estate Boards from New Westminster. Guest speaker was P. D. P. Holmes, president of the Victoria Real Estate Board.

Installed were: president, R. N. Carey, Courtenay; first vice-president, Ken Guest, Nanaimo; second vice-president, J. Ellis, Port Alberni; secretary-manager, S. G. Furk, Nanaimo. Zone directors: Parksville-Qualicum Beach, H. C. Hood; Duncan, J. E. Whitmore; Nanaimo, K. T. Guest and Frank Ney; Courtenay, R. N. Carey and W. Anderson; Chemainus-Ladysmith, J. E. Hess; Port Alberni, J. Ellis; Campbell River, C. Drainie.

CROFTON — The volunteer fire department here is investigating the possibility of building a new fire hall next year.

Meetings between firemen, the North Cowichan fire committee and council are being held to discuss details.

CHEMAINUS — The municipal signs committee is investigating a suggestion from the Chemainus-Crofton and District Chamber of Commerce that warning signs be erected at the entrance to Chemainus Park.

It was felt that signs would warn motorists that cars will be entering on the highway from the park. One member's car has been in an accident already.

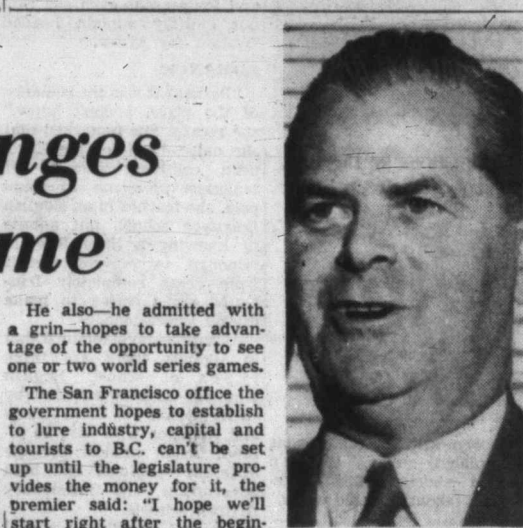

LADYSMITH — This central Vancouver Island community has been praised by the Seattle Yacht Club for making their stay in this area so pleasant.

The village sent down tanks of water to replenish water supplies following a predicted race in July. The race finished at the northern boundary of the village.

The commissioners had also supplied a manned information desk on the floats for the yachtsmen.

City Rolling Up Record In Construction Values

PREMIER BENNETT

He also—he admitted with a grin—hopes to take advantage of the opportunity to see one or two world series games.

The San Francisco office the government hopes to establish to lure industry, capital and tourists to B.C. can't be set up until the legislature provides the money for it, the premier said. "I hope we'll start right after the beginning of the fiscal year."

Third Ferry, Too

B.C. Pledges Gift For City Birthday

The provincial government "certainly" will assist Victoria city in celebrating its 100th birthday in 1962, Premier Bennett said yesterday.

He told a press conference the province won't want to interfere, but hopes the celebration will be a big one.

Mayor Percy Scourah welcomed the premier's assurance of aid, and also expressed hope of a big celebration.

WAIT FOR ELECTIONS

But he reiterated that he won't appoint a committee to prepare for the centenary until after the December civic elections, because otherwise the aldermen appointed might not still be on council in 1962.

Premier Bennett said tenders for an additional government ferry may be called as soon as a month from now. Plans of the existing ferries are being reviewed for slight improvements which, he said, are "bound to" be found.

READY FOR CENTENARY

The new ferry, he noted, will be ready for the city's centenary and for the 1962 World Fair in Seattle which he anticipated will bring "thousands and thousands of extra tourists to Victoria."

1,300 Tickets Still Remain For Big Bingo

Only 1,300 tickets are left for the 21st giant bingo night in Memorial Arena, arranged by Victoria Kinsmen's Club for Monday.

Sales, to 5 p.m. yesterday, totalled 6,200 — about 1,000 more than for any previous bingo, Jack Phillips, bingo committee chairman, said last night.

Reduction of the stage area and rearrangement of the seating plan have made 250 more seats available on the floor of the arena, he added. The extra tickets will be sold at Eaton's box office from 9 a.m. this morning.

Tickets will be sold from the box office up to 5 p.m. Monday. From 7 p.m. any remaining seats will be sold at the arena.

Up to $10,000 is offered in cash prizes for the evening. Top prizes are games worth $1,000 each, and consolation prizes of $10 each are offered to all semi-finalists who lose out in final games.

IWA Leaders Win Pay Fight

VANCOUVER — (CP) — In a close vote, the IWA's western division approved a $15-a-week increase for president Joe Morris and the secretary-treasurer, bringing their wages to $170 and $155 a week respectively.

Several delegates said salaries were high enough.

Courts Big Boost, Saanich Lagging

Victoria city so far is having its best building year—in dollar value—in the past two decades, and probably in history.

Roderick Clack, head of the planning and inspection division, looked back yesterday through the records of the last 20 years and failed to find a total to match the value of building permits issued by the city in the first nine months of this year—$7,407,694.

LAW COURTS HELP

Total to the end of September last year was $6,512,258.

A permit for the new law courts swelled the September figure to $2,008,759, compared with $608,794 in September last year, but Mr. Clack said, "We have preliminary plans in the office now for further substantial work."

NOT FAR BEHIND

Saanich was not far below last year's level in September.

During the month, the municipality issued 99 permits with a value of $772,620, including 27 dwellings at $352,250, compared with 99 permits totalling $836,250 last year, including 58 dwellings at $682,500.

NINE-MONTH TOTALS

Nine-month Saanich totals this year were 691 permits and $5,105,970, including 281 dwellings at $3,365,150. Last year the totals were 908 permits for $7,202,679, including 509 dwellings at $5,856,460.

Esquimalt figures were well down: 23 permits in September with a value of $23,085, compared with 17 the previous September with a value of $169,940.

Nine-month totals this year

September Weather Typical

September was a typically late summer month for weather.

Temperatures ranged from a low of 46 on Sept. 2 to a high of 78.2 on Sept. 11 and the average temperature was 55.7 as compared to an average 57.4 in past years.

There were 215.4 hours of sunshine, bringing the year's total to 1,837.7 hours. Normal for the month is 214.2 hours and for the year to this date 1,933.6 hours.

Year's rainfall total now stands at 14.31 inches, 4.5 less than normal. In September, 72 inch was recorded, 56 less than normal for the month.

Pensioners To Meet

Victoria Aged Pensioners' Association No. 3 will meet in the Canadian Legion Hall, Blanshard Street, at 2 p.m. Tuesday after which they will be entertained by Jo and Ron, musical entertainers. Members are also guests of Cedar Hill Golf Club on Fridays of this month.

Tommy Toots to Stay With Evicted Master

By PETER BRUTON

CATASTROPHE: Caretaker Bill Hilton celebrated his 82nd birthday Thursday by being told he had to give up his Blanshard Street cabin where he's lived for 38 years.

His first thoughts were not of himself but of his beloved cats, all four of them.

"I'd hoped to end my days here," he told officials of the Cat's Protection League as he tearfully explained his problem yesterday. "Can you find a home for my cats?"

The League quickly found a place for three of the pets but Bill adamantly refused to give up the fourth—a two-year-old ginger animal he calls Tommy Toots.

The old man remained in his cabin again last night, alone except for the company of Tommy Toots, but he must leave today. They want the land for a parking lot.

He hasn't the faintest idea where he will go today.

"But I'm not giving up Tommy Toots," he said.

SPEAKING OUT: B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Hugh Keenleyside is a trifle reluctant to accept invitations to speak to groups following a recent up-island experience.

He agreed to speak to a club but had to cancel at the last minute.

An item in the local newspaper later reported that the audience was "pleasantly surprised" when they found Dr. Keenleyside would be replaced as a speaker by a Vancouver newspaper columnist.

SIGN OFF: Fisgard Street butchers Wally Stewart and Archie Hubbard are going to be a little more careful when wording signs in the future.

A placard in their shop window yesterday proclaimed: "Venison, 5 cents a pound, cut, wrapped and frozen for your freezer." Then the invasion began.

Seems most people didn't realize they had to provide the

BILL HILTON

... last night at home

venison themselves. Sign was soon amended by writing a big "Your" in front of the word "venison."

The two said they've had "scores of deer" brought in so far but the biggest single order was a 1,000-pound moose, frozen solid.

DINNER GUEST: Patrons of the weekly smorgasbord at the Empress Hotel Thursday were treated to a dramatic floor show when a tabby cat stalked into the dining room and proceeded to accept titbits from the diners.

The cat neatly frustrated attempts by waiters to shoo it outside and even the intervention of head waiter Peter was thwarted.

After a sumptuous dinner the cat left with other diners, casting a scornful look at the hotel staff.

Gadsden Honored

Capt. B. J. Gadsden, former alderman and long the city's representative on the B.C. Aviation Council, has been named permanent honorary president of the council, the city was informed yesterday.

He has been so honored, the council said, "in recognition of his long-time interest in the advancement of aviation in British Columbia and his devoted support of the council in furtherance of its work for the betterment of air transport facilities throughout the province."

St. Louis College Meeting Slated

Former students of St. Louis College and fathers of boys now in attendance are being asked to attend a meeting at the college at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Upper storey verandas overhanging Pine Street is what made Nanaimo famous as an Old West setting. This one was destroyed 10 minutes after picture was taken and is at Pine-Hecate village entrance.

Flames leaping 200 feet in the air drew 2,000 people from all over Nanaimo to see yesterday's Chinatown fire. Chinese woman runs from blaze as volunteers pitch in to help save belongings and provide shelter.

HISTORIC VILLAGE LEVELLED

This is the end of Nanaimo's quaint Old West-style Chinatown. This picture taken at 6.30 p.m. yesterday shows a flaming pile of rubble.

Only four houses were left standing and they were starting to burn. — (Colonist photos by Alec Merriman.)

Elderly Chinese Lose Everything But Sleep Calmly

By G. E. MORTIMORE and J. T. JONES

NANAIMO—Elderly Chinese removed from their burned homes were helped up the steps of the old Nanaimo army camp by volunteer nurses and St. John Ambulance workers late last night, were issued army blankets, and settled down to sleep calmly in the lower tier of army double-decker bunks.

One old man, wearing only one shoe, refused to let go of the suitcase which he was carrying. Very few brought any belongings out at all. They rested stoically without complaint; some were invalids, some were crippled. A few of them brought only a pair of slippers which were laid beside their beds.

He was assisted by Dawson Gordon, civil defence controller. Provincial welfare authorities were preparing to take over rehabilitation of evacuees. Within minutes of the tragedy, Mount Benson Legion Branch set up a clearing house for all donations and offers of help. The CCF was planning a fund-raising bing.

CIVIL DEFENCE
The Community Chest will accept cash donations and will issue receipts. The address: Fire Relief Fund, Box 304, Nanaimo.

CASH DONATIONS
Among possessions lost were irreplaceable photographs, passports and other personal papers. For a Chinese approaching pension age, a passport is often the only means of establishing age.

GOOD AND BAD
Stories of human good and bad came out of the fire. Many students whose friends lived in threatened homes hurried up to Chinatown to help with the evacuation. There were also reports of looting of furniture and valuables.

COUGHS HEARD
A few racking coughs were heard in the dormitory from elderly Chinese with lung trouble.

Ten women and two small children were accommodated at St. Ann's convent. Ninety-four people, mainly elderly men, were checked in at the reception centre in the army barracks at the old Camp Nanaimo.

Numbers of people, bewildered by the ordeal, still were hiding in the bush bordering Pine Street. Search parties were doing their best to locate everyone.

Maj. Bob Weir, officer commanding C Squadron, B.C. Regiment, took charge of reception and relief. He is a reserve army officer and Nanaimo lawyer.

Diefenbaker Invites Macmillan to Ottawa

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker Friday night confirmed he has invited Prime Minister Macmillan to visit Ottawa before returning to England from the United Nations.

Mr. Diefenbaker also said he will return next week to New York for a third visit to the United Nations. He said no definite date has been fixed.

Neutrals' Summit Bid Puts Squeeze on Ike

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Five so-called neutralist nations, including India, asked Friday that President Eisenhower and Premier Khrushchev meet in a new summit as a "first urgent step" to ease world tension.

President Sukarno of Indonesia introduced the five-country resolution at the end of a long policy speech before the 15th United Nations General Assembly.

India's Prime Minister Nehru then requested that it be placed on the assembly's agenda. The proposal was automatically added to the agenda without further discussion.

Sponsors of the resolution are Ghana, India, Indonesia, the United Arab Republic and Yugoslavia.

United States observers speculated that the neutralist move placed the U.S. in a tight squeeze since Eisenhower—while saying he is willing to follow UN guidance in the search for peace—has also expressed unwillingness to meet Khrushchev face to face until the Soviet leader lets up on attacks against the U.S.

In a television interview recorded in New York, where he is attending United Nations sessions, the prime minister said: "What's going to happen? I can't tell you. It may go very badly. It may deteriorate. The Communists may be angry. At the same time, I think there's a chance that we'll get back to the mood which we were in six months ago before the summit conference flopped in Paris.
